SLOT MACHINES

Again there is much noise about slot machines and their prolific progeny, pinball machines. It is probable that the counties of the state that still permit them will join the others and bar them at least until the next election when the voters will have a chance to speak on the subject.

Since the state is already in the gambling business since legalizing horse and dog racing and attendant gambling it might be a good plan to get in a little farther and take over the slot machine business. Common knowledge is that the owners of the machines get fifty per cent of the take and do very well indeed from the returns.

Were the machines operated by the state for the benefit of the pension fund in county and state there would be means at hand to control the use of the machines and the income would certainly be a factor to be worth considering. There is no known audits of profits made from pinball and kindred devices but the general supposition is that they are substantial.

There may be moral resentment against the proposal but some form of gambling is always with us do what we will. The question is whether it shall be open or in darkened back rooms. Income from the pinball and slot machines would probably make quite an addition to the pension fund and might permit the state to increase the size of the average old age pension.

DIGGING WEEDS

Use of a potato digger to kill the most common of our perennial weeds may be one solution of what has come to be one of the most serious problems in the wheat belt.

Residents of the county for a generation can remember many weeds that threatened to take the county for a few years until means of combatting them were found. Cockle, China Lettuce and Jim Hill mustard are in that class and only one of them are dangerous at present. All of them were annual weeds, however, and easier to kill than morning glory. Yet it is probable that a way to handle the latter pest will be found. It may be the digger. Use of it consistently would keep the plant several inches below the surface of the ground far away from sunshine and air.

There is no question but that the suggested method would be expensive if much morning glory was to be killed for the ground would have to be worked every few days. Also there would be difficulty in keeping the ground from getting too dusty for safety during the blow season.

Certainly it is to be hoped that some way to kill the weed can be found that is cheaper than chemicals. Land once thoroughly treated with the most common chemical is useless for many years if not forever. Land that will produce twenty to forty bushels of wheat per acre every other year is pretty valuable to be irretrievably ruined unless absolutely necessary and if a less destructive treatment can be found it will mean a saving of many thousands of dollars to this county and every other one in the wheat belt.

NEW PRESIDENT

With the appointment of a supreme court judge, a federal judge named and a new member of the state supreme court in place the next appointment to quarrel over will probably be the new president for the University of Oregon.

The board of higher education might adopt one of two policies. It may either select from the professors in the university a man for president or go outside the state for a head. There is a group of men at the Eugene school who have opposed previous administrations for quite a few years and, if one may judge from the briefness of terms of former school heads, they have opposed successfully in that the school head had resigned. The attitude of this group may be the correct one and perhaps a representative of it should be put in the president's chair. It may be that he could control the faculty.

If an outside man is selected he will be subjected to the pulling and hauling that has been common in the past. He will have to demonstrate that he is capable of handling the situation, and unless he is a man of much more than ordinary judgment he will fail.

CONSOLIDATED POWER

Nomination of Hugo Black for the vacant supreme court place indicates as well as anything else the intent of the president to obtain control for the federal government over industry of the United States. Black is said to be the author of the wages and hours bill but might have merely introduced it for Cohen and Corcoran.

If such theories of government are persisted in for a few years wages for all industry will be set by a board in Washington and the hours to be worked each week will also be determined by a few men at the capitol. The supreme court if filled by Blacks, would of a certainty hold such legislation to be constitutional. Ordinary forethought will show a decided change in government by this delegation of authority.

If government can tell industry how many hours it can work it can tell farmers how much they can raise and what; can set the price of goods in trade.

Now there is some sort of control over irresponsible industrial power by state and federal government. When government is in control of both political and economic authority the only control will be in revolution.

BONNEVILLE

Each of the two groups wrangling over Bonneville power insist that it is the only one advocating that the electricity from the project be used for the people's benefit. Both undoubtedly feel that they are correct.

Those who want some of the power made available for industry feel that the producers of the district would be aided in greater degree if half the power was used for manufacture thereby bringing more people to the northwest and creating local markets for farm products.

Public power advocates hold that the people themselves should use the power and that if industry wants electricity it can build its own dam. Some of them even say that industrial use of the power would not insure any increase in population.

Bonneville will probably be the cheapest source of power in the nation. If it is consolidated with other projects the price will be higher and the district immediately adjacent to Bonneville will not receive the benefits that might otherwise be obtained. It is doubtful if the voters ever will have an opportunity to express themselves on the subject for it will be clouded with political charges and counter-charges and plain hooey from now until forgotten.

Governor Martin never will be popular. New he has gone and offered jobs to a group of former WPA workers.

When McCulloch is approved as federal judge the second district of Oregon will have two men on the bench in this judicial district.

Over in Idaho some of the farm land is just naturally sinking into a canyon. What peculiar troubles come to farmers anyway.

It looks like 1937 may be the first year since the twenties that winter wheat can get up in the fall. That will be a profitable change from spring sowing.

Westbrook Pegler insists that Fascism, Nazism and Communism are all but slightly different forms of dictatorship. Difference is that they use dissimilar means of arousing the people to make them forget their loss of liberty. Sounds reasonable. Some are taught to hate Jews and some to hate industrialists.

Probably a flier would not be much disturbed by the scenery while flying over the North pole.

An exchange uses this headline "Hall Raises Hell With Huckleberries" in reporting a mountain hallstorm.

STATEHOUSE GOSSIP

(Continued from page one) expressed himself as highly gratified over the progress being made in the commission's efforts to restock Oregon's forests and streams with wild life.

Thirty-five million fingerling trout and 40,000 young pheasants will be released from the commission's hatcheries this year the governor was informed with plans made for doubling this liberation of both fish and birds within two years.

Declaring that it was essential that every dollar available be spent directly in conservation and propagation of the wild life of the state if Oregon is to remain a hunters' and fisherman's paradise the governor announced that he would oppose continued diversion of game funds to support of the state police. Approximately $110,000 a year is now being contributed by the game commission to the police fund.

The tour included a visit to hatcheries at Corvallis, Alsea, Bandon, Roseburg, Eugene, the MacKenzie river, the lower Deschutes river and Hood River. The governor declared that he was now convinced that politics had been definitely eliminated from the administration of game affairs in this state and that the present game commission was one of the most efficient in the entire nation.

Following a conference with members of the Industrial Accident Commission the Board of Control announced that it would not consent to the use of Workmen's Compensation funds in financing the proposed Portland office building acquisition of which was authorized by the last legislature. Governor Martin and all three members of the Accident Commission were opposed to the proposed loan on the ground that it would "freeze" accident funds which might be needed in the payment of claims. State Treasurer Holman discounted the fears expressed by the Accident commissioners and supported the loan proposal as being good business and providing a better interest return than the commission can now earn on its bond investments. Rejection of the loan provision still leaves two methods of financing the Portland building open. One of these is through the sale of certificates of indebtedness secured by the building itself. The other is thru a straight-out rental plan.

Strict enforcement of the traffic laws must be had before Oregon can expect any reduction in its highway accident rate in the opinion of R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer. Admitting that educational campaigns, lectures and slogans might have their place in educating the younger members of society, Baldock declared that nothing but a wholesome respect for the law would ever reach the reckless, the careless and the drunken drivers who are responsible for most of the traffic accidents. In support of his attitude Baldock points to the record of Evanston, Ill., which has the lowest per capita accident rate of any city in the United States because of policy of strict law enforcement.

More than $800,000 in farm and city property was sold by the World War Veterans State (Aid Commission during the first seven months of 1937. Jerrold Owen, secretary to the commission, reported this week. This was property which had previously been taken over by the commission either through foreclosure proceedings or through voluntary surrender of the property by borrowers. Owen also reports a decided improvement in principal and interest payments by war veterans who have taken advantage of the bonus loans to finance purchase of homes or farms.

Appointment of Claude C. McCulloch of Klamath Falls as federal district judge for Oregon ends one of the most prolonged political controversies in the history of the state. Acceptance by McCulloch of the new post will leave vacant the position of chairman of the Democratic state central committee for which Jack E. Allen of Pendleton and Jack Caufield of Tillamook are being groomed.

In Other Days

From the Observer August 16, 1918 Sherman county local board has made a selective draft of four more men from this county who will leave for Camp Lewis on the 27th. Those selected are Byarde B. Fleck and Edward Tomlin of Moro, Arthur T. Holt of Kent and Harden P. Campbell of Grass Valley.

Joe Rutledge visited a few days in Moro this week. He has been transferred from New York to San Francisco and has ten days to make the trip. His brother Clarence is now on duty in Scotland while Joe has been on transport duty between this country and France.

Clyde Smith has the material on the ground for a modern residence on his farm in the Rutledge section. O. A. Ramsey expects to start the work early next week.

County commissioner R. J. Ginn has had signs posted on Lone Rock bridge warning users that the bridge is not safe for heavy loads. The court has let a contract for the construction of a new bridge to be ready by January 15.

From the Observer August 14, 1908 Exporters are paying 92 cents for club wheat and 95 cents for bluestem at Portland last week.

Everett White and wife visited Goldendale last week. Mr. White sold his crop of Turkey Red to W. W. M. for 80 cents.

When out for a ride in his new machine Wednesday Wm. Rudolf was thrown out dislocating a elbow. Dr. Goffin soon fixed him up and chaffer Huck took the auto to the garage. The machine circled twice before Mr. R. could regain his seat.

Autos are becoming so common now a days they attract no more than passing attention yet it has been less than two years since the first one passed through Moro.
