FARM LEGISLATING

It is now presumed that some time in the late fall the president will call a special session of Congress to take up among other things—the farm situation and pass in some form or other a new farm bill.

Practically every plan for governmental interference with industry has been tried either in this country or in others at some time in the history of the world.

The plan of buying up crops against lean years to stabilize prices did not work because production kept on and crops were plentiful.

Undoubtedly some such a plan is in the mind of the department of agriculture. It will be different from the previous plan in all probability.

Crop control will permit farmers in the United States to hold up the price of agricultural products if imports are stopped.

The most feasible plan yet offered is the soil conservation plan now being tried.

Any successful farm plan must be made successful through the education of the farmers and the general public, not through paying subsidies for compliance.

Old timers will remember when warehousemen piled the sacks by brute strength.

Now warehousemen use rubber tired trucks with roller bearings that are noiseless in motion and much easier to handle on rough floors.

Wheat bucks were brawny men in the olden days. They were full of rude jests for bucking wheat was rude work.

The president in a recent speech criticized those who, he says, distrust majority rule.

Do the Japs and the Chinese wear different colored uniforms so they can tell each other apart.

It has been stated many times that the urge for a farm bill at this time is based on the imminence of the 1938 elections.

In the long run it is the farmers themselves who will have to decide what they want, not the politicians.

OUR LITERACY

Some one has recently dug out the census report of 1930 for this state and sent out the startling information that Sherman county was among the three most illiterate counties of Oregon.

The report also shows that when the census takers went around in 1930 there were 80 Mexicans in the county. Now there is no way of telling from the information at hand whether our temporary visitors from the south were educated enough to be above illiteracy or not.

At the same time there were 34 Japanese in the county which is more than our average of residents from across the Pacific.

There are, of course, others in the county whose opportunities have been so limited that they have never learned to read and write but we are sure that the percentage in this county is smaller than the census figures would indicate.

Whether we of Sherman county are very smart or not we are bright enough to feel a bit hurt when it is reported that we are below average in literacy.

ITS DIFFERENT NOW

Old timers will remember when warehousemen piled the sacks by brute strength. They just threw them up tier after tier.

Now warehousemen use rubber tired trucks with roller bearings that are noiseless in motion and much easier to handle on rough floors.

STATEHOUSE GOSSIP

(Continued from page one) hearing scheduled for Monday, September 13. At that time it is expected that stockmen interested in the program as well as others will air their views on the three plans now before the board.

One of these plans provide for the administration of the state's scattered holdings by the federal bureau of Grazing, the state to receive its pro rata share of rentals paid by the stockmen for use of the public domain.

Another of the "blocking" plans, submitted by a committee of nine stockmen, calls for the creation of "blocking" around the private holdings of stockmen, these blocks to be of a size to meet the needs of the stockmen in each case.

Girl Scouts Like to Cook

ALMOST 12,000 Girl Scouts of America were awarded cook badges during 1936 and 71,500 passed tests in the homemaking arts according to an announcement made coincident with the 25th anniversary of the founding of the organization.

Tuberculosis Continues A Health Problem

These questions "Tuberculosis—From Whom Did He Get It? To Whom Did He Give It?" are symbolic of the public health significance of tuberculosis.

In Other Days

From the Observer August 21, 1938 Dr. Beers will leave on the 15th to represent Oregon at the International Congress on tuberculosis in Washington.

Henry Smith is up from his valley home looking after his farming interests in Sherman county.

Medames John P. Strahl, Myrtle Brash, Mary Wheat and Buxton took the north bound train Tuesday for visits in Multnomah, Washington and Lane counties.

W. G. Meloy has leased his ranch to Wiley McDonald, who has been working for Roy Powell. Mrs. Meloy and daughters will spend the winter at Corvallis while G. A. is as yet undecided where he will make headquarters.

G. E. Lewellen several weeks ago resigned as manager of the Moro Trading Company with the intention of moving to another location.

R. A. Murray is reported seriously ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. P. Yates in Wasco. Mr. Murray is one of the pioneer farmers of Sherman county.

Three Girl Scouts from New York City are pictured during a cake-baking class at a large eastern utility company, where they were shown the latest features of a modern automatic gas range and taught to employ the most up-to-the-minute baking methods.

Planning, preparing and serving refreshments, and the duties of a hostess are all part of the broad training Girl Scouts receive to fit them for future homemaking tasks.

likely to be found among those who are in closest contact with the case. "From Whom Did He Get It" would be the question asked if a case of small pox developed.

The detection of a possible source from which the disease is being spread is not always difficult, or expensive. As with a fire, the closer the contact of inflammable material the more likely the spread of the flames: so in tuberculosis, the closer the contact with a case the more readily does such a person develop the disease.

Fire fighting is primarily concerned with extinguishing the flames, but the intelligent fireman will always investigate the part of the building, or buildings, in the vicinity of the fire to determine how far the flames have already spread as well as to check their progress.

Fundamentally, there is much similarity between fires and tuberculosis. When a case of tuberculosis is diagnosed those called in to take care of the patient should not consider their work complete until every member of the household is carefully studied and his physical condition determined.

Tuberculosis costs the people of Oregon untold misery and thousands of dollars each year. Both of these may be minimized by effective action. Such action should be based primarily upon known and effective methods of controlling the disease.

When a case of tuberculosis develops in a family, have "medical detective" measures applied to the investigation of the family. Good "medical detectives" hold no one above suspicion, or relieve him of blame, until medical study proves him free from the disease.

Remember the old axiom—an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. In the past, service was sometimes not available or the necessary examination could not be afforded. Today, these excuses do not apply.

Prevention and diagnostic services are within the grasp of every person in the State. If anyone has the slightest doubt as to his physical condition, he should go to a physician for a thorough examination.

If there is a case in the family every member should have a careful examination. When anyone hears of a case of tuberculosis, he should ask the question, "From Whom Did He Get It?"
