Before you plant KILL SMUT GERMS

USE S-W BASUL The New Copper Compound for Efficient Economical, Easy Control

THIS IS HOW STINKING SMUT DESTROYS UNTREATED WHEAT

You Can't Always Detect Smut Smut spores are so small they are clinging to seed grain even though the grain looks and smells perfect.

Smut Grows and Spreads Smut spores which may attach young wheat sprouts. The threads grow up inside the stem of the wheat plant. When the grain heads out these SMUT threads grow into the wheat blossom infecting the developing kernel.

One Smut Ball can Contaminate Several Bushels of Wheat An infected wheat kernel is soon replaced by a smut ball containing several million spores of stinking smut. One smut ball easily infects many thousands of normal kernels of wheat.

Don't let Bunt or Smut infection rob your yield and profits. Use the improved treatment—Sherwin-Williams BASUL. BASUL is a fine powder which adheres especially well to the grain. It is a vast improvement over copper carbonate, because it costs less per pound, provides equal or better control, and is easily applied with standard seed treating equipment.

Actual tests by many experiment stations throughout the country, BASUL has given equal or better results than copper carbonate and other products designed for bunt and smut control! Seed treated with BASUL can be stored for months without injury; will not "set" in the drill. So BASUL is proving genuinely good news for wheat growers—better smut control at lower cost with greater convenience!

Homemakers' Trailer On Trip Through State

Oregon home makers interested in building or remodeling for greater comfort and convenience will have an opportunity in the next few months to view a suggested set-up for a farm family kitchen, carefully planned as to heights of working surfaces, storage spaces and other important details.

Such a kitchen has been built on a trailer at Oregon State college, and is now touring the state, visiting fairs and other gatherings where it may be inspected by the public. Accompanying it is an exhibit of home electrical equipment and appliances, with a cost meter which will indicate which appliance is running and exactly how much it is costing an hour.

The demonstration kitchen was planned to meet the needs of the average farm family in Oregon, keeping in mind the multiple purposes which this room is called upon to serve, points out Mrs. Azalea Sager, state leader of home economics extension at O. S. C., who planned the exhibit with the cooperation of other members of the extension and home economics research staffs.

Heights of working surfaces are based on the results of a recent survey of those preferred by some 500 home makers in Oregon and Washington.

A bulletin has been prepared for distribution to those interested in kitchen planning, covering use of color in the kitchen, standards of kitchen planning, adequate kitchen lighting, kitchen plans for Oregon farm homes, and a description of the demonstration kitchen, materials and construction standards, and working surface heights. Working drawings of the built-ins in the trailer kitchen may be obtained at cost from the state college extension service at Corvallis.
