Bunchuck—Do you know how old the American prune is?
Dzudi—Oh, I would say off-hand that it must have been in use in this country for over 50 years.
Bunchuck—Why man, the American prune is over 83 years old.
Dzudi—Then no wonder it's full of wrinkles.

Mother (discovering her little daughter washing the kitten with soap and water)—Oh, Joany, dear, I don't think the mother cat would like the little one washed like that.
Joany—Well, I can't help it. I can't lick it like she does.

Paralysis Occurs Again In Oregon This Fall

Cases of acute anterior poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis are again occurring in this state, and it is of importance that the public understand the nature of this alarming infection. Poliomyelitis is caused by a filterable virus which is most infectious during the first ten days of the disease and possibly during the incubation period. The disease is transmitted or communicated by secretions from the upper respiratory tract and the infection is conveyed by acute cases of the disease or by undiagnosed cases, by healthy carriers or by convalescent patients. The disease occurs in the temperate zone throughout the world. It tends to break out in lonely and remote districts; congested districts are apparently immunized readily by the ever present virus, and city dwellers are liable to be exposed to the disease earlier in life than are country people. It occurs at its maximum in the warm months of the year. Most of the cases occur in the one to five year age period.

Almost without exception an attack of poliomyelitis confers a lasting immunity. A temporary passive immunity may presumably be obtained from the injection of serum from patients who have recovered from the disease.

There are a number of types of the infection. A patient may take ill with an attack consisting of a mild respiratory and digestive disturbance with an illness from twenty-four to forty-eight hours. After two to four days the patient may become ill again and develop paralysis. The cases are classified as non-paralytic and paralytic. In the abortive type the case can clear up in a day or two and no further symptoms develop. When paralysis has appeared in an extremity, contractions are apt to develop with resulting secondary deformities. After paralysis has occurred complete rest is indicated. Definite harm can be caused by moving or handling the patient. The muscles should be supported so that no strain be put on them.

Patients should be isolated for fourteen to twenty-one days after the onset of symptoms. Children known to have been definitely exposed to the disease should be excluded from school for fourteen days. There is ordinarily no public health necessity for closing a school.

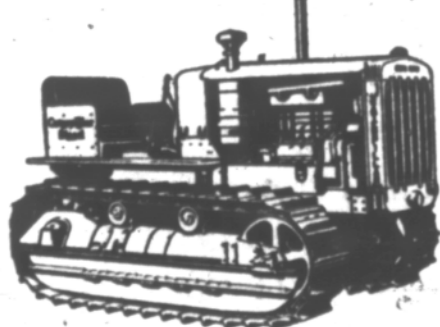

In the time of an epidemic of the disease unnecessary gatherings should be omitted and children should avoid congested places. Personal contact such as kissing and hand shaking should be avoided.

Pets should be handled. Milk for drinking purposes should be pasteurized or boiled. Individuals should keep physically fit with special attention to proper food, elimination, rest, fresh air and exercise. Cleanliness of person and environment should be constantly enforced. Prophylactic treatment of the nose and throat should be carried out only by a physician.

Fewer Gears! Better Gears!

The "Caterpillar" design employs the simplest, most direct method yet known for conveying power from engine to drawbar. Power follows a short, direct, power saving path from engine to tracks. There are no "detours" . . . no "wandering" . . . no complications. The "Caterpillar" transmission is simpler . . . better.

O'MEARA SUPPLY CO.

Hi-Ways to Health by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

School lunches today aren't all in the paper bag, or the tin pail. Some of them are served entirely or as a supplement, at school as a hot lunch project.

The hot lunch is such a rewarding project that it is arousing interest of Boards of Education, Parent-Teachers organizations, associations and civic organizations. Children who can benefit show a rising curve in classroom work, in daily attendance, in weight gain, and again the quality that after all is more important, "happy health."

Sometimes doubt exists on the value of the hot dish. To cite the example of the value of the hot mash at noon in cold weather for the chickens and hot milk for the calf at each feeding is convincing enough. Children thrive in like manner from a warm, appetizing, well-balanced noon meal each day of the school year, and particularly through the cold months.

Sometimes a start is made with supplying one hot dish to accompany the sandwiches brought from home. In this event it is not necessary to prepare a rich energy food, that is present in the sandwiches; but it is necessary to serve dishes rich in milk and vegetables. These two foods . . . the most important . . . are many times the most slighted when all three meals are not served at home. When milk is served to children in bottles with straws it is well to remind children to shake the bottle before inserting the straw. This is to get every bit of cream and important Vitamin A that it contains.

And here are a week's supplementary dishes that do not beggar appeal.

Monday—Creamed Potato and Onion Soup
Tuesday—Hot Chocolate
Wednesday—Scalloped Cabbage & Cheese
Thursday—Creamed Tomato Soup
Friday—Washington Chowder (Serves 25)
5 cups raw diced potatoes
1 cup raw diced onions
1 gallon water
1 teaspoon salt
4 cups canned corn
4 cups canned tomatoes
3 quarts whole milk
1 cup butter

Cook potatoes and onions in boiling salted water. When potatoes are barely tender, add corn and tomatoes and boil together two minutes. Scald the milk. Add hot vegetables mixture to scalded milk just before sending to the steam table crocks. The chowder should be made up just as needed in order to prevent curdling the milk by either the tomato or salt.
