Farmers Anxious To Initiate Bill For Labor Law

Unanimous approval of an initiative measure to fix the legal responsibility of labor organizations and to define what constitutes labor disputes, was recently given at a state wide meeting of the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation, held in Portland.

The measure, which this growing organization asks the voters to approve at the general election next November, follows in detail the recommendations of the Granges and numerous subordinate Granges which are seeking to bring about a solution of current labor troubles.

A proposed bill, embodying the suggestions of the Granges and other farm organizations, has been filed with the Secretary of State by a group of farmers in Southern Oregon, and it is believed that many other farm groups, including the recently organized Associated Farmers of Oregon, will give their united support to this measure.

The bill provides that there can be no picketing or boycotting unless there is a bona fide controversy between an employer and his employees, and it further provides that controversies between labor organizations shall not be classed as labor disputes.

Ralph W. Perry of Hood River, who is making a spectacular race against Ray W. Gill for Master of the Oregon State Grange, has been one of the moving spirits in obtaining the approval of county Granges to this legislation, and, according to reports received by him and his supporters from every section of the state, he is gaining strength daily and promises to give Mr. Gill a real battle at the final Grange election to be held during the month of April.

(A spot map showing the location of every motor vehicle traffic fatality in Oregon last year was recently completed in the office of Earl Snell, Secretary of State. Black pins, representing 5 deaths each, are thickly clustered in Portland and also dot the Pacific highway from Portland to Salem. Red pins, each representing one death, trace the courses of the Columbia River, Coast and Pacific highways and are also numerous in the Bend and Klamath Falls areas.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH

OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

It was once said that we find the two most important things on our door step every morning. One, the daily newspaper bringing current events from all points of the globe; and the other a bottle of milk, containing a greater assortment of essential food elements for the body than are found in other food.

If the paper were suddenly discontinued, we know the loss could be compensated by news media such as the radio. However, if the supply of milk were suddenly discontinued the loss would create something little short of a panic.

The fact of a "quart of milk a day for children" is quite well established; even though in actual practice it is too often disregarded. The fact of "a pint of milk each day in some form for adults" is not so well known, or if known, reasons for not including it in the daily food intake are usually "I don't like it, I cannot afford to drink it, and milk makes me fat." This casual attitude not only destroys children's enthusiasm for milk, but it also destroys the adipose tissue and cells that have been built and need to be sustained through good food practices.

Adults who do not like milk can acquire a taste for it if they know that it is going to be important as a "preserver." This may be done by a simple substitution program of perhaps milk for coffee at lunch time, and milk in addition to coffee, (if desired) at dinner time. It is a plan of breaking one habit and establishing another for "taste's sake."

Milk consumed by adults in the home cannot be considered expensive and prohibitive, when the true return for the amount expended is not equalled by any other product on the grocer's list. Milk continues to be the cheapest form of adult insurance.

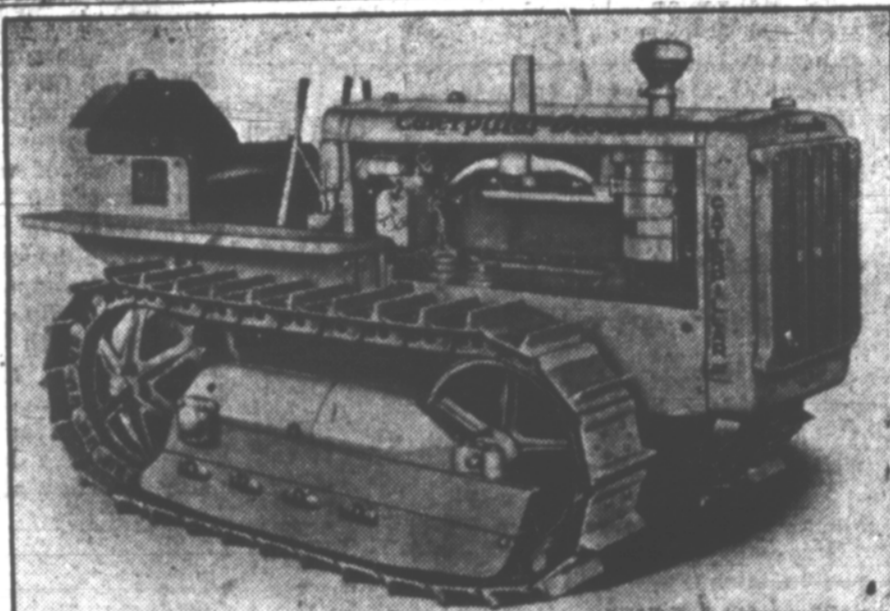

Lastly, all adults are interested in correct weight. More often it is the fat and starchy foods taken in proportion to the amount of exercise that is responsible for increased weight; but milk taken with a proportionate amount of food in relation to activity will never alone create havoc with the scales.

If the adult is interested in maintaining tissues and cells in youthful tone, he attempts to include a liberal amount of vegetable and fruits, at least a pint of milk and additional amounts of foods each day, and learns with gratification that "he has become victor for the spoils."

Standard Two Egg Batter Cake
Two cups flour
Three egg baking powder
One fourth cup salt
One half cup butter
One cup sugar
Two cups beaten
One teaspoon vanilla
Three fourths cup milk

Sift and measure the flour, add baking powder and salt, and sift twice again. Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add the eggs and beat the batter thoroughly. Add vanilla. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk, one third at a time, beating after each addition. Pour into a large shallow loaf pan or into two layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees for about 35 minutes or until the cake is done.

Leading the trend toward a more economical form of farm power, Caterpillar Tractor Company of Peoria, Illinois has announced a new 3-4 plow Diesel-powered tractor.

Especially designed for farm work, the new tractor, working in average conditions, will use only 1-2 gallons of low cost fuel an hour. This compares with two gallons of distillate or gasoline, which an efficient spark ignition machine of similar horsepower will use.

Pat O'Meara, the local "Caterpillar" dealer, estimates that savings of 60 to 80 percent on fuel costs may be expected from this machine, as has been the case where larger Diesel tractors have replaced spark ignition models.

Called the "Diesel D2," the tractor will bring Diesel economy to new thousands of farms through out the country. It is completely modern in design, with comfort and ease of operation considered.

The engine is a four-cylinder, four-stroke cycle type, with 31.5 horse power on the belt and 25.5 horse power at the drawbar. There are only three operating adjustments—the water pump, the fan belt and the valve clearance. The Diesel fuel injection pumps and valves are set at the factory and require no field adjustment.

Take a Tip from your neighbor

Buy a ten-year "Caterpillar"

Your neighbor bought a "Caterpillar" many years ago . . . and the machine he bought . . . just like the ones we offer today . . . was built to give the lowest depreciation and operating costs over a long period. "Caterpillar" Tractors cost a little more to buy because they cost so much more to build . . . but they save money for the owner over any other tractor built.
