More Power Speed Traction Economy

Nothing like the D2 was ever offered for farm work

Here is a truly revolutionary farm tool . . . a tractor that provides more drawbar pull than anything of its size

. . . a range of five forward speeds with the favored 3-miles an hour for plowing . . . the best traction yet offered because of perfect distribution of weight over the tracks . . . and economy that isn't approached by any previous tractor.

Think of it . . . a 3-4 plow tractor pulling a full load on an average fuel consumption of 1 1/4 gallons of cheap diesel fuel per hour. Your next year's profits will be larger with the D-2 working for you.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

"What's the dessert, Mother?" isn't just an idle question; it means a definite interest. The enticement of a variety of small fruits available at this time of year gives the dessert an important role in the dinner. These fruits are valuable in vitamin and mineral content and can be as nourishing as a main dish if it comes at the end of a light meal. The definite dislike that a few children may have toward two or three vegetables can be overcome over a few months by serving only smally portions.

Small portions, do not, of course, supply adequate mineral and vitamins; but a favorable attitude toward them is established and the nutritious milk-fruit type dessert then becomes a valuable agent in supplementing the deficiency.

Like-wise, the child uninterested in milk as a beverage is not so much a feeding problem when milk-cream-rich desserts can be planned to include it. Frequently the planning of milk-rich meals without visible signs of milk becomes a good problem. Quantities are concealed in soups, mashed potatoes, milk toast, in rice pudding (rice baked slowly in the oven over an hour's period), in ice cream, and then in the countless milk-cream fruit desserts.

When the fruits have not been used in the body of the desserts, they assure success through their sauces. For this purpose, the fruit is sliced, quite highly sweetened and then allowed to stand to extract its own juice. A Spanish Cream follows this example and draws well when either frozen or fresh fruits are used. Strawberry Spanish Cream Two tablespoons granulated gelatin One quart milk Three fourths cup sugar dash of salt Four eggs (beaten separately) Three fourths c pusugar One and a half teaspoons vanilla Strawberries Soak gelatin in one half cup milk for five minutes, scald remaining milk in double boiler then add sugar and a few grains of salt. Separate eggs. Beat yolks until light and pour scalded milk over broken yolks. Return to double boiler and cook gently until the mixture thickens like custard. Pour mixture over gelatin, stirring constantly; add vanilla; then add the stiffly whipped egg whites, blend carefully and well. Pour into individual molds and chill. Remove from mold and serve with sliced and sugared strawberries.

How To Enjoy An Automobile Vacation

One of the most inveterate travelers in the world is the American. Steamship, railroad and automobile association statistics prove this to be true. This fact is emphasized in the spring, summer and autumn months when the automobile becomes by far the most popular means for the family to see the world. While this vacation tendency is commendable, to permit it to get out of bounds is neither wise nor healthful.

"For instance, there should be much more to an automobile vacation than mileage. Yet every year there are thousands of tourists whose main idea appears to be to cover as great a distance in a given time as they possibly can, and then come home and boast about it.

"If an automobile holiday were an endurance test, and a race track instead of the crowded highway were used, this practice might be justified. But, aside from the very important safety hazard involved, a vacation so spent is beneficial neither to mind nor body. And any vacation that makes it impossible for one to rest and relax falls far short of the mark from a health standpoint. Indeed, to come back home 'happy but tired' is to defeat the main vacation possibility.

"Office and factory life, surrounded as they usually are with high tension work, demand that the annual fortnight's excursion include some relaxation and rest. And in this connection it is heartening to note that the automobile is being used by so many as a means of transportation to recreational camps or more elaborate resorts, where the back to nature rule is emphasized.

"Of course, there is no need to become fanatic on the subject of health in considering the summer vacation. On the other hand, even though excitement and a few thrills are considered essential to a satisfying annual holiday, the health factor should not be overlooked.

"Nature, after all, is a great physician. Wholesome food, fresh air, and a reasonable amount of rest should therefore be included in every vacation program. Making the most of her possibilities will pay dividends in terms of renewed vitality and health."
