Mumford Takes Burrier's Place

Appointment of D. C. Mumford as new head of the farm management department at OSC, succeeding A. S. Burrier, will bring the staff a man already well known to many Oregon farmers through his connection with the AAA and other government programs, says Wm. A. Schoenfeld, dean and director of agriculture.

Mumford was for several years an assistant to George E. Farrell, director of the western region of the AAA. In that capacity he spent considerable time in Oregon, where he became familiar with the educational research and service program of the college in the field of agriculture. He is the son of Dean H. Mumford, for many years head of the agricultural school at the University of Illinois.

Range Improvement Passed By AAA

Progress of the range improvement program under the AAA in Oregon has just been viewed by representatives of the state AAA committees from northwestern states who made a tour through the eastern Oregon range country. The trip was made in advance of a conference of state representatives to be held in Salt Lake City June 23, to consider possible changes in the range improvement program for 1939.

N. E. Dodd, state chairman, represented Oregon on the tour and at the Salt Lake meeting. With the committeeman was DeWitt C. Wing, noted agricultural feature writer, who gathered material on the Oregon range improvement program for future publications.

CHANGED OLYMPICS

Dr. Jigoro Kano, Japanese member of the International Olympic committee, who changed the date of the international games in Tokyo from August 24 to September 21, 1940. The shift creates a serious conflict for American collegiate runners who should be attending classes. Many athletic authorities favor changing the 1940 Olympic site from Japan to London, Helsinki or any other place.

"Sound" Baseball Played by Blind Performers

Teams from the Industrial Home for the Blind at Oakland, Calif., demonstrate "sound" baseball. The batter hits a jangling ball and runs down a padded baseline. Ten players form a team. The fielders kneel on pads back of the baseline to catch the sounding ball and register an out by rolling the ball over the bases or baseline ahead of the runner. Home plate has a bell on it to show when runs are scored.

Small Pox Serious In Some Cases Say Health Men

A death from black or hemorrhagic smallpox in this state should remind our citizens of the serious nature of this infection to the unvaccinated. Although most of our cases of smallpox are so mild that they are mistaken for chickenpox these cases may start an epidemic of virulent smallpox among the unvaccinated at any time. Smallpox is one of the most virulent of communicable diseases and persons exposed, if unprotected by vaccination, are almost invariably attacked. On the other hand smallpox may be exceedingly mild even in unvaccinated children. Very often a correct diagnosis is not made until a death occurs. The disease sometimes shows the most extraordinary variation in the same family. In the Linn County case of black smallpox the infection undoubtedly came from an extremely mild case. During an epidemic of chickenpox all cases having symptoms of an initial chill, headache, and vomiting should be viewed with suspicion. The disease is contagious from the very beginning but the dried scales of the eruption constitute the most important element in the spread of the infection. It is usually spread in public conveyances and meeting places. It must not be forgotten that an unprotected person may contract a very virulent form of this disease from the mildest cases. Vaccination and revaccination prevent the disease. "Smallpox, formerly a scourge, and still a lurking menace, can be wiped out by thorough vaccination and revaccination, starting in infancy." Columbia.

"Smallpox is now a comparatively rare and mild disorder in civilized countries thanks to Jenner's discovery of the protective form of vaccination." Nelson

The above statements are not taken from medical books but from reference encyclopedias. No reputable scientific authority now doubts the efficacy of vaccination. To say there is more danger from vaccination than smallpox is a statement that cannot be substantiated by scientific investigation. Modern vaccination is a surgical, clean procedure and presents less danger than a pin scratch. The simple puncture method is painless, bloodless and grants protection from smallpox in any form. Children should be vaccinated as early as six months. No child should be allowed to attend school without vaccination. Compulsory vaccination of all school children and before employment has made smallpox a rare disease in countries where these regulations are enforced. States and countries having such laws have no smallpox. Vaccination against smallpox is done by means of vaccine virus introduced through the skin. The multiple pressure method requires no dressings and has been adopted by the army and navy after many years of trial. Jenner taught that a single vaccination protected for life. Today we advise every one to be revaccinated every seven or ten years.

this way they prepared miniature text books which they were encouraged to take home for reference and study.

More than 1000 boys and girls attended the safety classes, and showed a gratifying knowledge of the safety problems which were presented to them, according to John C. Kerrick, who conducted the course.

Those who attended displayed great interest in the reactometer, furnished by Secretary of State Earl Snell, which is designed to test the length of time for a driver to see danger ahead and apply the brake. A model automobile is guided along a moving highway by a person being tested, and at the flash of a red signal light the person takes his foot off the accelerator which controls the speed of the highway, and steps on the brake.

A highlight of the session was the presentation over station KOAC of two plays written by 4-H club members and entered in the traffic safety play writing contest sponsored by Secretary Snell. Dean Jackson and Helen Michael, both of Lane county, were the authors of the two winning plays.
