Dangers Found In Swimming Pools By MDs

Oregon, like most of the other Western states, has gone in heavily for swimming pools largely because most of its streams are polluted and unfit for bathing purposes. Many persons still bathe in the rivers and creeks and they are often the people who add to the number of typhoid cases. When the sun is hot and the water looks cool and refreshing, little thought is given to possible pollution and on a day's outing the temptation is usually too great to be resisted. Swimming is a healthful exercise if indulged in properly. From a safety standpoint the old swimming is gone; today we depend on the artificial swimming pool to furnish lifeguards and safe water, continually purified to give the greatest amount of health protection.

Swimming instructions should be included in the curriculum of every school and should be encouraged as a healthful and invigorating exercise. It must be remembered, however, that man is not physical equipped for aquatic life and there are certain precautions that should be taken by all those who engage in this sport.

Here are a few of the don'ts that every swimmer should know: Don't go in swimming for at least one hour after meals. Don't swim alone except under observation of experienced swimmers. Don't try deep water until you have mastered the art of swimming.

Don't swim too far out until you have tested your endurance in the water.

Don't swim in pools in which the bottom is not visible.

Don't dive unless you know the water depth is safe.

Don't stay in too long.

Remember too, that even a swimming pool unless it is equipped with recirculation, filtration and chlorination equipment may soon become unfit for its intended purpose. Proper maintenance of recirculation and purification equipment is as important as proper equipment. Middle ear infections leading to mastoid trouble often are traceable to insanitary pools. If sinus infection is already present, excessive swimming and diving may cause purulent material to be carried from the nasal cavity to the middle ear. Virulent germs in a pool improperly constructed or operated may reach the middle ear and set up infection, so persons with head colds should stay away from pools, and swimmers who are subject to colds should avoid under water swimming and diving when there is any doubt as to the purity of the water.

Change of residence is no longer a deterrent to obtaining unemployment compensation. Five hundred Oregonians now residing in other states are being paid benefits by the Oregon commission.

"You say you know the plaintiff's reputation, and you know it to be anything but good?"
"Yes, I do."
"Then tell the jury, on your oath what reasons you have for making such a statement."
"Well, I can say on oath that I have met this man in places where I would be ashamed to be seen!"

Job placements increased 65 per cent in June over May, according to report by the Oregon employment service to the unemployment compensation commission.

Field of Corn Waves in City Street

Three Chicago youngsters with a taste for truck gardening "plowed" and cultivated a tiny patch of ground near the curbstone of their residential street and soon had a thriving field of corn. Photograph shows the three city "farmers" tending their crop in the extremely foreign city atmosphere. Left to right, Joe Dambie, Rose Huntsman and Neal Dambie.

FACTS FOR DRIVERS

By EARL SNELL, Secretary of State

"You Always Have Time To Drive Safely" will be the slogan used on Oregon license plate mailing envelopes for the year 1939, Secretary of State Earl Snell announced this week.

The Ontario, Oregon, Argus recently suggested a good slogan for the touring motorist: "See America First—but don't try to do it all this week end." Secretary of State Earl Snell seconds the suggestion that tourists plan schedules which will not call for long drives at unreasonable speeds.

Traffic accidents, injuries and fatalities all slumped sharply in Oregon during the first six months of 1938, compared with last year, Secretary of State Earl Snell announced today. Most noticeable drop was in fatalities, which declined 14 per cent.

The average licensed driver in Oregon drove 3,000 miles during the first six months of this year. Reports from gasoline companies show that more than 100 gallons of gasoline were sold between January 1 and June 30, sending the total gasoline tax paid during that period five million dollars for the first time in the state's history.

Revocations and suspensions of Oregon driver's licenses for violation of traffic laws were 22 per cent more numerous during the first half of this year than in 1937, according to Secretary of State Earl Snell. During June, 88 licenses were revoked and 44 were suspended, with drunken driving and reckless driving the chief causes.

The fact that many drivers' licenses are lost, destroyed or mutilated is proven by the issuance of nearly four thousand duplicate operators' license cards in Oregon in the six months from January 1 to June 30, Secretary of State Earl Snell said recently. He advised drivers to keep their license cards in wallets or special holders, rather than carrying them loose in their pockets.

Frequent sudden stops not only damage the brakes of a car by overheating, but also create excessive wear on the lining, Secretary of State Earl Snell said this week. He advised drivers to stop their vehicles by pressing lightly on the brake pedal well in advance of the place they wish to stop.

Anti-Racketeering Bill Initiated

Voters will have a chance in November to vote on a measure having for its purpose the regulation of some phases of the labor situation. The measure has been initiated by the Associated Farmers, Inc., the Eastern Oregon Wheat League and other farm organizations and will, if enacted by the people, prevent picketing unless there is a labor dispute between the employer and his own workmen. A dispute between two labor organizations could not be aided by picketing.

Other sections of the bill would make it illegal to interfere with the marketing of harvesting of farm products and would prevent the building up of union funds for which there is no legitimate needs. It would also be illegal to prevent or interfere with persons seeking work.
