Rain Won't Keep 'Em Away!

Officials of the forthcoming world series aren't worried about rain. They need only remember the 3,000 rabid fans who jammed the bleachers and unreserved seats at New York's Polo Grounds before the fifth game of last year's series, undaunted by cold, drizzly weather. Last year's series between the New York Giants and New York Yankees, which broke series attendance records, is expected to be exceeded this year.

Wallace Predicts Continued Aid To Agriculture By Government

The present and prospective situation in America and in the world with regard to wheat production is such that continued governmental programs will be necessary, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace told some 1500 wheat farmers gathered at Hutchinson, Kansas, last week in one of the most important "wheat meetings" in years.

To handle and finance such a program Wallace advocated reinvestment of some form of processing tax on wheat products in order that the adjustment in wheat acreage could be made self-sustaining without direct appropriation from the federal treasury. Such a self-sustaining program was followed during the first years of the AAA before the plan as then drawn was pronounced unconstitutional. It was Wallace's belief that a constitutional program accomplishing the same ends can be enacted by Congress.

The meeting in Kansas also became a forum for criticism of the AAA policy in regard to wheat when one of the leading wheat grower opponents of federal crop regulation was given time for an address. At the conclusion of his speech he asked for an expression of sentiment by vote, but only a scattering few supported his position, according to Oregon delegates attending.

In the mean time in Oregon the county wheat meetings have now been completed with exceptional interest and attendance in most regions. Most growers attending appeared to be planning to "go along" with the program, despite the extra acreage reduction planned for next year. Most of the questions asked at the meetings concerned what would be needed in the way of compliance and what could be done with the acreage left out of wheat.

On the latter point final definite word could be given. Certain substitute crops can be used but final use for acreage beyond the total soil depletion base has not been fully decided upon. Growers were told that most substitute crops would be seeded in the spring anyway, hence the matter of first importance is how much wheat can be seeded under the program.
