Drivers Really Blinded By Head Lights

A fact which puzzles many drivers is that they are apparently blinded for a few seconds immediately after passing an approaching car at night. What some drivers do not realize is that this blindness is not merely apparent—it is very real.

Part of the difficulty lies in the period required for the pupil of the eye to enlarge after being forced to contract by the brilliant headlight glare. Only when enlarged to the fullest extent are the pupils efficient in detecting subtle differences of shade in dark objects.

But this adjustment in normal persons is comparatively rapid. A second and more important adjustment is required in the chemical substance forming the light-sensitive cells in the retina, which mirrors what the eyes perceive. These cells, composed of a substance called "visual purple," are rapidly depleted when exposed to strong light, and the speed with which they build up again varies according to the individual's stored-up supply of the necessary ingredients.

Experiments have demonstrated that the chief element in visual purple is vitamin A, and that persons possessing plenty of this vitamin readjust themselves quickly after exposure to light, while others may require several seconds.

Therefore, drivers who experience more than an instant's "blindness" after passing another car should allow for this slower reaction, and cut their speed as much as necessary until their dark-perceptiveness is restored.

HOLIDAY COOKIES

Everyone likes cookies and every home maker knows the joy of a well-filled cookie jar during the busy holidays. There is nothing so completely satisfactory for that in-between appetite, (yes, in spite of all the dinners in the world), than cookies, and if you are planning gifts from your kitchen there is none more acceptable than delicious cookies in holiday dress, packed carefully and "done up" in gay Christmas wrappings.

The first consideration in making cookies is this... never economize by using inferior ingredients. It is much better to use a more economical recipe than to substitute for the butter, eggs and other ingredients that mean delicious flavor and high food value in the finished product. Nature has given butter a distinctly appetizing flavor that has never been imitated and good cooks the world over have recognized this quality of flavor in making cakes and cookies. To quote from one famed expert: "When you take butter, eggs and milk away from the kitchen, you simply have no kitchen."

Here are two recipes that have the holiday spirit, especially if you dramatize them with Christmas decorations.

Holiday Molasses Crisps

One half cup of molasses
One fourth cup butter
One and a fourth cups sifted all-purpose flour

Three fourths tsp baking soda
One half tsp ginger
One tsp grated orange rind

Bring the molasses and butter to boil in a saucepan. Cool slightly; add the remaining ingredients and mix well. Chill; then roll on a floured board to one eighth inch thickness. Cut with fancy cutters into Santa Clauses, Christmas trees, angles, men-in-the-moon, or any desired shapes. Bake in moderately hot oven of 375 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes. When cool, frost with an icing of confectioners sugar and cream. Then before this icing has a chance to set, decorate with red or green sugar, or tiny varicolored candies. Makes about three dozen cookies.

Holly Wreath Cookies

Two third cup butter
Two third cup granulated sugar
Two eggs, well beaten
One teaspoon vanilla extract
Three and a half cups sifted cake flour
One half teaspoon salt
One and a half tsp baking powder
Cream the butter, add sugar

GOPHER MENTOR

One of the nation's foremost grid-iron strategians, Coach Bernie Bierman, is shown in this candid camera study as he watched his Minnesota Gophers during a workout for their title defense of the coveted Big Ten championship. Coach of the Minnesota eleven since 1932, Bierman's Gopher teams won national honors in 1934-35, and the Western conference crown, or a share of it, in 1934, 1935 and 1937.

gradually, and cream together. Add the eggs and vanilla and mix. Mix and sift the flour salt and baking powder, and add. Chill the dough and roll out to one eighth inch thickness on a lightly floured board. Cut with a floured doughnut cutter into Christmas wreaths. Decorate with small pieces of candied cherries and citron to represent a holly wreath. Arrange on buttered baking sheets and bake in moderately hot oven of 400 deg for 10 to 12 minutes. Makes about 45 wreaths.

Red Cross Seeks Cut In Accident Toll

Cognizant of tremendous losses in human lives and of permanent injuries resulting from accidents in homes, on farms and highways, and around industrial plants as well as in the basement workshop, officials of the American Red Cross have been directing a systematic fight against what they term "this economic waste."

As part of this nation-wide effort to reduce deaths and permanent injuries from accidents, a recent statement from Red Cross headquarters in Washington reports that during the past 12 months certificates have been granted to 295,028 persons completing courses in the administration of Red Cross first aid.

Holders of these certificates have followed detailed courses of study, and have been taught how to splint fractured limbs, stop flow of blood, treat poison sufferers, care for victims of heat, electric shock, and handle other common emergency situations. The courses emphasize methods of caring for patients until professional medical aid can be summoned to scenes of accidents.

Since 1910, the report reveals, 1,785,406 persons have received this training from qualified Red Cross instructors, and at the present time 20,429 persons are qualified to give such instruction.

Bringing help nearer scenes of possible accident, 2,454 emergency first aid stations have been established in strategic locations on principal highways throughout the nation, operators of the stations receiving the prescribed Red Cross instructions and maintaining full first aid equipment on the spot. Conveniently placed, they also maintain up-to-date lists of available doctors and ambulance services pledged in advance to cooperate with Red Cross first aiders in preventing deaths and permanent injuries that so frequently result from automobile accidents.

Mobile first aid units also have been established in cooperation with state highway and police departments, operators of public utility vehicles and others frequenting highways, operators of such units also receiving the prescribed Red Cross courses in first aid.

To cut the number of persons losing their lives through drowning while swimming, the Red Cross has redoubled efforts to train as many persons as possible in life saving methods. During the past year 88,150 persons received certificates upon completion of courses. Since 1914, 884,649 persons have been trained in Red Cross life saving methods, including thousands of persons in CCC camps, beach patrolmen, camp instructors, and school boys and girls.

Carrying the fight onto farms and into homes, a campaign to eliminate accidents caused by careless habits and faulty equipment last year resulted in self-checks being made in 10,000,000 American homes through cooperation of children in school, women's clubs, farm organizations, and other groups. The 2,700 Red Cross chapters and their branches in every county are cooperating in this national effort to end needless pain and suffering resulting from such accidents.

These efforts to lessen such appalling tolls of human lives and usefulness are made possible through memberships in the Red Cross. The annual Roll Call will be held between November 11 and Thanksgiving Day, when all Americans are asked to join or renew their affiliation to ensure continuation of accident prevention measures.
