Statehouse Gossip

The Salem printer who inadvertently substituted a "g" for a "q" in the headline announcing "Pigme in Statehouse Will Honor Ex-Governor" wrought far better than he knew. For it has proven to be just that, a plague to Secretary of State Snell, this plague which admirers of former governor Martin want to place in the new capitol.

When the capitol was completed its architects advised against the addition of any embellishments other than the murals. Yielding to the pressure of various patriotic groups, however, Secretary of State Snell set aside the first floor corridor as a "memorial hall" to which plaques and memorial tablets were to be confined. Three such plaques now adorn the walls of this corridor.

Sponsors of the Martin plaque, however, are not at all satisfied with this arrangement. The corridor is too dark and dismal for one thing and too isolated for another, they say. They want the Martin plaque placed in a more conspicuous location—preferably in the reception room of the governor's suite. Whitehouse & Church supervising architects on the capitol, have advised Snell that this request might be acceded to without doing too much violence to the building "if it does not establish a precedent."

But that is just the rub. Snell fears that it will set a precedent. If the Martin plaque is hung in the executive suite friends of other governors will insist upon the same recognition for their idol until in time the walnut panels of the reception room will be completely hidden behind bronze plaques, even as the walls of the legislative chambers in the old capitol were cluttered up with the horrors that passed as portraits of former governors.

And there the situation rests. The plaque is ready to be placed but until the custodian of the capitol and the plaque's sponsors can get together on a location no plans can be made for its dedication.

State Treasurer Walter A. Pearson opines that it would be good advertising for the state if an attractive hostess could be employed to meet and greet visitors to the new capitol, of whom there are several hundred every day. Governor Sprague agrees with him. So also does Secretary of State Snell. But, Secretary of State Snell points out there are no funds out of which a hostess could be paid. Again Governor Sprague agrees. So it appears, barring the advent of some philanthropist or some patriotic group willing to shoulder the cost, visiting tourists will have to find their way around the new statehouse without benefit of a hostess as they have in the past.

Can You Afford

NOT TO BUY IT?

A neighbor who owns a "Caterpillar" D2 Tractor gave us a new thought the other day. He said: "I put off buying a 'Caterpillar' Diesel for a long time because I thought I couldn't afford it. Say, if I'd known that for every $100 I spent for fuel before, I'd only spend $25 on the D2, I wouldn't have put off buying it like I did. I figure now, I can't afford not to own it."

A 'CATERPILLAR' DIESEL DOESN'T COST..IT EARNS!
