Dr. E. W. Warrington, professor of philosophy and religion, was the guest speaker of the affair.

Farming Started In Oregon In 1828

Farming in Oregon had its beginning in 1828 when Etienne Lucier, a Hudson's Bay trapper, plowed the first furrow on French Prairie, according to an item in the Oregon Almanac written by WPA. Among other items of an agricultural interest noted in the Oregon Almanac is that in 1795 the first garden was planted in the Oregon Country by the crew of the ship Rusoy; that the first agricultural fair in the state was held at Lafayette in 1854; that Gloria Mundi apples sold for $2.50 each, until the supply was exhausted, at the agricultural fair held at Jacksonville in 1859; and that the flax industry was introduced into the state in 1875.

The Oregon Almanac for 1940 reviews many serious and amusing incidents in Oregon history, interspersed with bits of original verse, nonsense and pen sketches. Listed in the chronological information are weather statistics of the past, sidelights on the fashions, modes of living and customs of the state when it was young and brief accounts of humorous historical happenings. The Oregon Almanac, scheduled for early publication, will be on sale at news stands and book stores early in December.

Mrs. Ada Morgan of The Dalles is spending the holiday week with her daughter, Mrs. Pres Boice.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Johnson and Mrs. Sam Brock entertained friends at contract recently.

Mrs. Fred Fortner was hostess to members of the PNG club and officers of the Eastern Star at her home Tuesday evening. Mrs. L. P. Haven was remembered with a gift from the ladies present.
