Oregon Press To Confer At University

University of Oregon, Eugene, Jan. 18.—Newspapermen of Oregon will hear about propaganda, the Oriental situation, coast labor problems, newspaper features and various phases of advertising when they meet on the University campus Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, January 25, 26 and 27, it was announced here today by George Turnbull, professor of journalism and secretary of the conference.

Headline speakers will include Donald J. Sterling, managing editor of the Oregon Journal, who will speak on features; Wayne L. Morse, dean of the university law school and coast arbitrator for maritime labor controversies; Philip L. Parish, chief editorial writer for The Oregonian, whose subject will be propaganda; Harold J. Noble, professor of history at the university, who has just returned from Japan, and Robert G. Smith, advertising director of Lipman, Wolfe and company, Portland.

The latest "dope" on the Oregon championship basketball team will be given by Harold Hobson, who will be speaker at the Friday luncheon. State agricultural advertising laws will be explained by Merle W. Menly, vice president of Botsford, Constantine and Gardner, Portland. "The Newspaper Looks at the Motion Picture" is the topic selected by Laurence E. Spraker, of the Stayton Mail.

The handling of labor news will be explained by Dick Fagan, writer for the Oregon Journal, while the lucrative sidelines open to the weekly papers will be told by Joe E. Brown, publisher of the Redmond Spokesman. "The Legislature and the Newspaper" will be the subject of Giles L. French, publisher of the Sherman County Journal and member of the house of representatives.

To Assist President in World Peace Problems

Hopes for world peace on the part of President Roosevelt have resulted in two recent far-reaching moves. First was the President's appointment of Myron C. Taylor, left, former head of United States Steel, as this country's representative to the Vatican to work with Pope Pius for peace. Second was his invitation to religious leaders to confer with him. Invitations went to Rabbi Cyrus Adler, center, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, and to Dr. George A. Buttrick, right, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Archbishop Spellman of New York City was expected to be named as representative of Catholics in the peace conference.

Telephone Change

new and there are but few places in Oregon where they are in operation. Where success has been good as but seven service calls have been made in four years at Rockaway and a similarly small number in other places where installation has been made.

The equipment is housed in new, heavily insulated buildings which contain heating units to prevent freezing. It is explained that the equipment itself is not injured by cold. Heat is provided because power for the lines comes from wet batteries that might freeze. These batteries are kept charged by electricity from regular current and are able to give service for 72 hours without benefit of recharging.

The buildings vary in style of architecture, the one in Wasco being of a colonial type, the Moro one a mission style and the one in Grass Valley similar. This is done merely for variety, says Mr. Turnbull.

Wasco's is the largest as calls into The Dalles all go through each successive exchange requiring more of the bands of copper brains and fingers that do the automatic switching.

The new phones that are now installed in every subscriber's home carry 48 volts whereas the old ones operated on 6 volts. The lines are new because of much work by farmer owners and telephoning should be much more mechanically perfect than formerly.

New numbers have been issued to every subscriber and instructions given in dialing. While there may be some minor difficulty for a few days it is expected that persons in this county will learn the new method quickly and that service will be better.

Moisture Helps Wheat Prospect

It was generally believed that the moisture situation in the winter wheat states has greatly improved crop prospects. Practically the entire winter wheat area was covered with snow. The moisture situation in India relieved drought conditions in important wheat producing sections of that country, according to reports, but some damage was feared in Hungary due to severe frost. It was reported that crops were damaged by floods in southern Spain and Portugal but that crop prospects are favorable in Italy and western Europe.

Stocks of wheat on farms in the United States on January 1, were somewhat smaller than a year ago and were estimated at 238,985,000 bushels compared with 280,088,000 bushels last year. Farm disappearance of wheat during the quarter, October through December was approximately 20,000,000 bushels smaller than for the same period last year and total aled around 99,678,000 bushels. The disappearance in market stocks however, was about 20,000,000 bushels more than last year during the October-December quarter, making the farm and market disappearance of wheat during the quarter about 2,000,000 bushels smaller than last year. Farm and market stocks at the first of January totaled approximately 372,000,000 bushels compared with 409,000,000 bushels in these positions a year ago.

Hi-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

Many home makers are inclined to overlook the opportunities offered by casserole cookery. Since casserole dishes do afford such an excellent way to use up left overs, it behooves home makers to follow certain rules in their preparation.

Some cooks are apt to allow the remaining bits of a baked ham, a roast, or the dinner vegetable to be tossed carelessly into a casserole and as soon as they are heated, assume that the family will be pleased to see them. If the left-over food must be served the next meal or the next day, be sure to change its form in such a way that it becomes a new and tempting dish that everyone will enjoy down to the last morsel.

Everyone recognizes the natural affinity of such foods as bread and butter, cheese and crackers, ice cream and cake. Each contributes something not supplied by the other, and each complements the taste of the other - in some cases it is contrast in texture, and in others it may be a difference in flavor and color which makes them so attractive together. In preparing casserole dishes, try and combine foods that are contrasting in flavor as well as color. Include a little change in texture here and there and you have the foundation of a recipe upon which you may build many a casserole dish that really spells good eating. Just to refresh your memory as to the many foods that lend themselves to casserole dishes, here are a few of the time honored favorites... macaroni, rice, potatoes, eggs, cheese, bread, vegetables, fish and practically all types of meats.

Here is a suggestion for a casserole dish - it may be prepared from leftover food or you may find it so tempting that you'll not be able to wait until you have leftovers. However, regardless of how the ingredients are obtained they will make good eating for the entire family.

- Cheese-Ham Casserole
Two tablespoons of butter
One and a half tablespoons flour
One cup of milk
One cup of grated cheese
Two cups cooked macaroni
One half teaspoon salt
One and a half cups chopped leftover ham
Two tablespoons horseradish
Two teaspoons prepared mustard
Make a white sauce of the butter, flour and milk. Add the grated cheese, macaroni and salt. Fill a buttered casserole with this mixture. Combine the ham, horseradish and mustard. Sprinkle over top of macaroni, pressing ham into the mixture slightly. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. for 20 minutes. Serves 8.
