Traffic Accidents Take Lives Rapidly In Oregon In 1940

Traffic accidents in the state of Oregon claimed lives at the rate of 14 per 100,000,000 miles of travel during the first quarter of 1940, it was announced today by Earl Snell secretary of state. The death rate for the first quarter of this year was the same as for the corresponding period of last year.

The traffic death rate is computed on a basis of the total number of persons killed during the period in relation to the number of miles traveled as shown by gasoline consumption in the state.

The death rate for the month of March this year was 13, one point higher than the rate for the same month last year. Travel in the state totaled 219,810,929 miles during the month of March, an increase of 4.7 percent over the mileage for March, 1939.

Gasoline consumed during the month totaled 19,214,241 gallons, an increase of nearly ten percent. For the first three months of the year, consumption totaled 51,071,677 gallons compared to 46,470,021 gallons for the same period a year ago.

Hi-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

In speaking of a child's first teeth, a dentist has recently used the phrase "foundation teeth" which more clearly indicates the importance of these teeth than the commonly used terms "baby teeth" or "temporary teeth". The first teeth are considered the foundation on which rests the soundness of the second - and permanent teeth.

Many persons pay little attention to the first set, knowing they are temporary. But the permanent teeth are formed while the "foundation" teeth are still present, and decay in the first teeth may injure the second set. Extractions may prevent the proper formation and growth of the jaw bone, resulting in crowding or malformation of the permanent teeth.

It should be remembered, too, that the condition of the foundation teeth are an index of a child's general state of nutrition. Decay of teeth usually results from some deficiency in the diet that may be affecting other parts of the body where the results are not so easily seen as in the teeth. The sooner corrections are made, the less danger there is that permanent harm will occur.

Records of school children today show that at least 90 percent have one or more decayed teeth. If the first teeth were more generally designated as "foundation teeth," their real significance might be more generally recognized. They might more frequently be given adequate care - fillings when needed, extractions only when necessary and daily or twice daily brushings to keep them clean. Emphasis on the protective foods, which include one quart of milk daily, an abundance of fruit and vegetables, and eggs at least four times a week, will assure the essentials for building good teeth. With such care, the next generation should have better permanent teeth - and better general health - than children today.

Getting enough milk into the diet is an easy matter if you use milk in your food preparation. One glass of milk at each meal plus one or two foods prepared or served with milk and the quota will be met.

An appetizing dish because of the milk used in it is Creole Spinach.
Creole Spinach
One quart spinach
Two tbsp chopped parsley
Four tsp butter
Four eggs, well beaten
Two cups milk
One cup grated swiss cheese
One tsp salt
One-half tsp paprika
Wash and chop spinach. Add parsley and cook in the butter for 10 minutes. Add well beaten eggs to the milk and pour over the spinach. Add cheese and seasoning turn into buttered casserole, place in a pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven, 350 deg., for one half hour. Serves 6.
