Wheat Growers Held Aided

Pacific northwest wheat growers received fully two and a half million dollars additional income from their 1939 crop as a result of the federal commodity loan program, in the belief of Edgar L. Ludwick, wheat loan supervisor for the northwest states. He said that growers averaged about ten cents a bushel more for their wheat by taking out loans and awaiting a favorable market than they would have received had they sold immediately after harvest. Federal commodity loans were made on approximately 24,000,000 bushels of wheat in the Pacific northwest at about 58 cents per bushel. Practically all this wheat has now been moved into regular channels. Less than a million bushels of loan wheat is still unsold and this is in the form of farm stored wheat which will be resealed and kept under loan.

OSC experiment station the results of which have just been published as station bulletin No. 369 entitled "House Planning Ideas of Oregon Rural Women". Laura Wells is co author.

In order to find out the ideas of Oregon home makers based on actual experience, a survey was made by means of questionnaires of 450 home makers throughout the state. About 60 percent of these actually lived on farms, while the remainder lived in villages, suburban areas or on small acreages.

Some of their conclusions varied considerably from those of the professional builders. Although a majority of the home makers queried prefer separate dining rooms they also want the kitchen to be large enough for use in serving family meals comfortably. Furthermore, the women questioned are not in favor of a combination dining and living room. Only one woman in eight favored such combination. Outdoor dining areas, on the other hand, are popular both for family meals and for feeding the crews of farm help.

As to sleeping arrangements 99 percent of the home makers said they wanted their own bedrooms on the first floor. A second bedroom on that floor is desired by many of those whose children are young. The bulletin may be had free from extension offices.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH

by ADA R. MAYNE

OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

The phrase "Don't use a pinch-hitter for butter," is a typical characteristic one from Dr. Victor Heiser, internationally known doctor and author. Dr. Heiser is an ardent advocate of the use of liberal quantities of dairy products daily because of their valuable contribution to the diet.

Although butter is used universally and its unique flavor has made it a first choice of good cooks every where, surprisingly few know its food value and the many interesting facts behind the production, handling and distribution of this important food.

Butter is not only the equivalent in energy value of any other food fat, but it is the only one that contains any considerable amount of the vitamins. Butter is an excellent source of vitamin A and contains some vitamin D. Vitamin A is essential to growth and contributes to the health and vigor of adults and children alike. Scientific experiments show, too, that butter is easily and almost completely digested and thus adds to its value as a food.

With this knowledge of the nutritional value of butter, it is seen as a health food, and because it is an economical way to provide these essentials, butter should be used generously not only as a spread but in preparation of other foods. There are many ways butter may be used - in baking, in puddings, for flavoring vegetables and other foods; in sauces, for browning and frying foods, flavoring spreads for sandwiches, in soups, and of course, as a favorite spread for bread. Because of the low melting and smoking temperature of butter, high cooking temperatures should be avoided.

With strawberries appearing on the market, surprise your strawberry hungry family with these muffins and be sure you have plenty of butter for them.

Pretty soon along comes harvest, the busy season of the year.

Before that begins every business in the county will want to be equipped with plenty of printed forms and stationery so that the rush of business can be handled speedily and with a minimum loss of time and effort.

This office is equipped to print forms and business stationery of all kinds.

"Two years ago I decided to buy a Caterpillar D2 Tractor and today I'll say it was the smartest move I ever made.

"Formerly I did my farming with a wheel tractor and in combining, I had to look the field over to be sure I could work it. But with the D2 I just pull into the field and go to it. I have found the D2 can go anywhere and work on any kind of ground that crops are planted on."

Many owners like Mr. Luck tell us of the superiority of "Caterpillar" features - those plus values which mean extra safety catches for their pocketbooks. Why not investigate them today?
