Water Ruined Wheat but Income Saved

One of the first Oregon farmers to benefit this year from federal crop insurance is Mrs. Ellen Herlihy of Algoma district, Klamath county, shown in inset with her two grandchildren. Due to bursting of a dike, waters of upper Klamath lake rushed in upon her wheat field, giving rise to a dike. Herlihy's farm home is in the background, flood waters almost upon to the front door. Mrs. Herlihy, who is a widow and manages her farm alone, received 1009 bushels of wheat from the crop insurance corporation in payment of the loss.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

Home makers today take for granted the refrigerator in the kitchen. But there is more to it than just mere ownership. Every home maker should know how to manage her refrigerator correctly to get her money's worth in food protection. A temperature of 50 degrees F. will keep most perishable foods a reasonable length of time. There should be, however, some spot in every refrigerator that is 45 degrees F. or lower to keep dairy products and uncooked meats. This coldest spot in the refrigerator is usually located directly below or beside the ice or freezing unit.

To keep milk cold and sweet is one of the refrigerator's most important jobs. Rigid inspection in most cities insures the consumer of a pure milk supply, kept safe thru proper refrigeration. But from the moment milk is left on the doorstep it becomes the homemaker's responsibility to keep up this rigid safeguarding. Milk should be placed in the refrigerator immediately after delivery to keep and taste as it should.

The length of time that the milk stays sweet depends largely upon the care it receives. It should be used as soon as possible after it is delivered. Today's milk is always better than yesterday's and if any is left over it should be the milk used for cooking. If milk or cream is left in the pitcher after a meal it should not be mixed with the milk or cream still in the bottle. Always remember that milk and cream must be kept "cold, covered and clean." Milk, cream and butter take up odors from other foods, so keep them covered in the coldest part of the refrigerator. The same rule holds good for milk desserts and milk leftover dishes—such as cream soups, sauces and creamed vegetables.

Should the milk or cream sour even with these precautions it is possible to cook it into many dishes that are more delicious because of the souring. Try this sour cream dressing on potato salad - it's delicious!

- Sour Cream Salad Dressing One teaspoon of mustard One teaspoon of sugar One half cup of milk One-half teaspoon salt One teaspoon of flour One and a half teaspoon of butter One egg One-third cup of hot vinegar One-half cup of sour cream

Combine ingredients in top part of double boiler. Beat the egg, add milk and stir into the dry ingredients gradually. Cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture coats the spoon. (Do not let water boil in bottom part of boiler.) Add the hot vinegar and butter and remove from heat. Cool and add sour cream.

- Sour Milk Gingerbread One-third cup of molasses One-half cup of sour milk One cup flour One-half teaspoon soda One-half teaspoon of ginger One-fourth teaspoon of salt Two tablespoons melted butter

Add milk to molasses. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add slowly to liquid. Add melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven about one-half hour.

A pioneer farmer living on the banks of the Umpqua River is said to have fattened his hogs on sturgeon. According to the story he built his hog pens close to the banks of the river. The Pacific tides made considerable ebb and flow in the stream so he hit upon the idea of trapping the fish in wire mesh nets at high tide. When the water ebbed he had sturgeon to toss to his hogs. The animals are said to have fattened in short time but there is no record as to whether or not the pork was fish-flavored.—Oregon Writers' Project, WPA.

Annual growth of trees adds about one and one-third billion board feet to Oregon's supply of merchantable timber.

The Best Will Be There

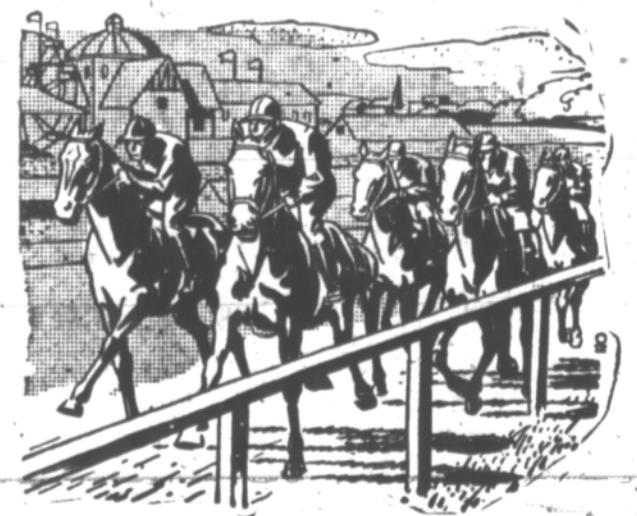

Often people think it an idle boast when they hear it said that the stock displayed at the Sherman County Fair is the best in the state. Well, of course, it can't all be the best for there's only one best in each class. That is true, but between now and fair time Sherman County horses will be adjudged the best in Oregon for their breeds.

In October our 4-H club boys will win the awards at the Pacific International and if the judges there call 'em the best that's good enough for us.

Del Wright is arranging a fine drill of horseback riders.

There will be a clown who has a varied act. Concessions, Dances Mac Barber's buckers and our own racing stock that runs the closest races in the country every day, every race.
