Dead Pedestrians Often Aged

Of the 17 pedestrians killed in Oregon during the month of October, all but five were over 50 years of age, the average of all such victims being 55.4 years, it was revealed in a study made by the traffic safety division of the state department, results of which were announced today.

In contrast to the higher age average of pedestrian traffic victims, drivers of the cars which struck them were approximately 20 years younger on the average, the study disclosed. Only three of the drivers were over 30 years of age and six were under 19.

For the city of Portland alone, the average of the pedestrian victims was 63 years while the average age of the death drivers was 23 years. Most of the state's pedestrian deaths occur in the residential districts of urban areas

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

No financier makes more important investments than does the woman who spends the weekly food allowance. She sees the results of her money management reflected, not in financial loss or gain, but in the health and happiness of her family. Setting a good table can be a great strain on the budget, unless one plans the meals carefully with due regard to both monetary and dietetic values.

"You can spend enough money on food to buy a good diet and still suffer from hidden hunger." That is the gist of a recent survey of diets of farm and city families made by the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture and four other government agencies. In other words, many a city family is not laying out its food dollars so as to buy health and good nutrition. Many a farm family is not making the most of its land and livestock to feed the family right. Diet deficiency is widespread and it is not confined to families whose income are too low to buy enough of right kind of food.

In grading diets for the survey any diet was called "unsafe" that did not furnish at least the average amounts of the food values the body needs just to keep it going. This type of diet is unsafe because a person can't count on it to keep him in shape to stand up under ordinary stresses and strains of life - much less fit him to meet any kind of a crisis. Unsafe diets bring in their train such symptoms as chronic fatigue, lethargy, and certain types of digestive disorders. Results of these symptoms may be a person who is constantly under par - in his resistance to disease and his general well being.

The country over, the outstanding difference between good and poor diet lies in the greater amount of the protective foods that the good diet contains. These foods include milk, eggs, green leafy vegetables and fruits, especially the citrus fruits and tomatoes. These foods are called "protective" because they are rich in certain minerals and vitamins. And they are especially valuable because they supply calcium and vitamin A and C - the food factors frequent ly low in poor diets. Milk should be supplied in amounts of one quart for each child every day and one pint for the adults if the safety level for calcium is to be maintained. A close-up of the diets in this survey showed that those rated excellent used three times as much milk, and almost twice as many vegetables and fruits, as the diets rated as poor or unsafe. Obviously from this study, it is well worth any homemaker's time to study values and their relation to food costs.
