Grand Coulee To Increase Dairy Foods

Into the lands to come into production when the Grand Coulee irrigation project is fully developed dairy production will hold the dominant role, federal department of agriculture planners told agricultural leaders at a recent session in Salem. The speakers, Marion Clawson, W. U. Fuhrman, W. T. Calhoun and Jack Guthrie, are holding similar meetings in the coast states so there will be an understanding among farm leaders what this irrigation project will mean to the agricultural marketing problems of the coast section. Dairy men probably will be secure from effects of the new irrigated lands until 1950, but after that dairy products will be in the surplus column unless factors unforeseen develop.

First irrigated lands on the project will be available, it is now thought, in 1944. Some 50,000 to 75,000 acres will be brought into irrigation yearly until the 1,200,000 acres of irrigable lands are in production. Development is expected to continue at least until 1970. Emphasis was given to statements that plans now are tentative and may be changed. Some 200,000 people are expected to settle the area.

As result of the session in Salem, a 12-man committee from Oregon's dairy industry will be picked to keep in touch with the federal planners. J. D. Mickle, director of the state department of agriculture who called the Salem meeting, named a preliminary committee, with A. P. Ireland, Forest Grove, chairman to select the permanent committee.

Two thirds of all the project lands, the agriculture planners feel, must be in alfalfa or pasture permanently, and from this comes the picture of a 259,000 dairy cows, plus 137,000 head of young stock and bulls. Dairy production by 1970 may reach 55 million pounds of butterfat on the market, or about 80 per cent of the total Washington butterfat production of today. Other livestock estimates place 120,000 head of beef cattle, 158,000 ewes, and 55,000 horses on the land. Crop lands will be in grain, cash crops such as sugar beets, truck gardening and fruit.

Hyah, Pop!

Dr. Hal Ladd made his round of pastoral calls last Sunday afternoon. At the home of one of his parishioners, James, Jr. answered the doorbell.

"Paw ain't at home," sez Junior. He went over to the golf club. Rev. Ladd raised his eyebrows, pulled a long face and heaved a sigh, but Jimmie was equal to the occasion.

"Oh, he ain't gonna play golf; not on Sunday. He just went over for a few highballs and a little stud poker."

Double Wonder.

"Yes, my wife gets more out of a novel than anybody."

"How do you mean?"

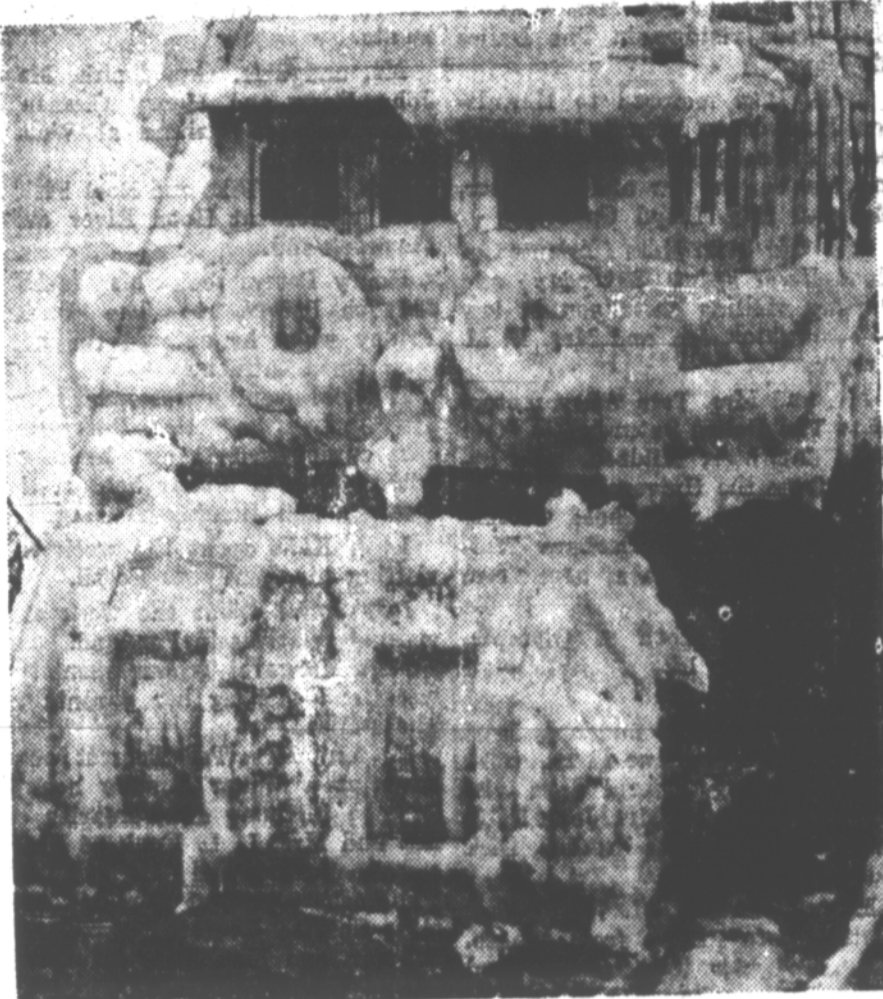

"Well, she always starts in the middle, so she's not only wondering how it will end, but how it began."

The despotism of custom is on the wane. We are not content to know that things are; we ask whether they ought to be.

John Stuart Mill.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH

By ADA R. MAYNE
OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

There is a universal urge to remain youthful, to maintain one's place in the world of affairs, to add not alone to one's years of life but to lengthen the period of efficient enjoyable living. We can't help ourselves from growing older but we can do a lot to prevent ourselves from feeling older.

Physical vigor and enthusiasm for living, taken together, embody that cherished thing called vitality. The secret of vitality is physical fitness and is, in a large part, due to eating the kind of foods that the body needs. Leaders in medicine and in nutrition are emphasizing as never before the part played by food in good nutrition and the importance of good nutrition in physical fitness and efficient living.

It's no fun to be dragged out at the end of the day and yet this is a common complaint and known to most everyone. Scientific studies have shown that this physical exhaustion, as well as the slump or let down that comes while on the job, is due in many cases to improper habits in eating. Meals that are too limited in amounts, and the long periods between these meals are the most apparent of these poor eating habits.

It is to everyone's advantage to eat the right foods and in quantities large enough to supply the energy needed to do the job and to allow for the extra personal activities. The protective foods, milk and milk products, fruits, vegetables, eggs and whole grain cereals, are the foods that supply minerals and vitamins in abundance and because of this, the energy and vitality that we cherish. Try never to let your family's milk quota fall below a full quart for each child and at least a pint for each adult. If you use milk generously in cooking, this standard can be easily accomplished. Here is a dish full of minerals and vitamins:

- Scalloped Asparagus
- One third of a cup of butter
- One fourth cup of all purpose flour
- One teaspoon salt
- One fourth tsp pepper
- Cooked asparagus
- Two cups milk
- One pint, chopped
- Four hard cooked eggs, sliced
- One half cup grated American cheese
- One third cup of fine dry bread crumbs

Melt four tsp of butter and stir in flour, salt and pepper to make a smooth paste. Stir milk into flour paste and cook slowly, stirring constantly until thickened. Remove from heat and stir into pint, cover bottom of a buttered casserole with half the asparagus (reserve 6 or 7 tips for top), eggs, sauce and cheese. Repeat and top with bread crumbs. Garnish with asparagus tips. Melt remaining butter, pour over top, and bake in hot oven (425 deg.) for 20 minutes or until crumbs are browned.

THE RECORD... Facts That Concern You

No. 25 of a Series

EVERY SCHOOL AND EVERY BUSINESS HAS ONE OR TWO

In a school full of bright, self-respecting students, there are very likely to be one or two completely lacking in good common sense. And that goes for business, too... particularly the beer retailing business.

Out of thousands of beer retailers who conduct respectable, law-abiding businesses, there may be a few "dunce" retailers who disobey the law or permit anti-social conditions.

These few unwanted retailers are a menace to the future of the beer industry... and also of the benefits beer has made possible. Right here in Oregon, beer provides employment for 13,238 persons, supports an annual payroll of $11,541,550 and contributed $617,020.86 last year in state taxes.

It is the brewers' responsibility to make good beer—the retailers' responsibility to sell beer in wholesome surroundings—and the legally constituted authorities' responsibility to enforce the laws. All of these, working together with the public, are needed to protect the future of beer.

You, too, can help the cause of moderation by (1) patronizing only reputable places where beer is sold; (2) and reporting any violation you may observe to the duly constituted authorities.
