Farm Price Index Remains Constant

The index of local market prices of farm products in mid-March was reported today by the Agricultural Marketing Service as unchanged from a month earlier. At 103 percent of the 1910-14 average on March 15, however, the index was 6 points above the level of a year earlier. Local market prices for all major groups of farm commodities except grain and cotton were higher than a year ago.

Moderate increases in grain and cotton prices were reported during the past month. Fruit prices were up seasonally, and dairy and poultry product prices were unchanged from a month earlier. But prices of meat animals and other commodity groups averaged lower in mid-March than in mid-February. Indications are that prices of most farm products have tended slightly upward during the last half of March.

Domestic demand for farm products, as indicated by consumer purchasing power, continued on the up-grade in March although the increase was smaller than in other recent months. Little change was noted in the export demand for agricultural commodities during the month and exports stayed near record low levels.

Abundant supplies of farm products continued to cram the nation's larder. As American farmers prepared to plant 1941 crops, nearly a year's supply of cotton was already on hand. Stocks of grain at terminal markets were about 26 percent higher than a year ago.

Some Figure! Employment In Oregon Good

Shapely Darlene White, Union Pacific band drum majorette, stands on the rubber bumper, to point to the spectacular "Mars" headlight, a new device on two new 6-70 horsepower Diesel-electric locomotives now being tested by the Union Pacific and which will pull two new 18-car transcontinental streamliners—City of Los Angeles and City of San Francisco. The headlight throws an oscillating beam in the form of a "figure 8" for a quarter of a mile on either side of the track.

Oregon ranked high among other states in employment placements, particularly in agricultural activity, while the states payments to the unemployed during 1940 were exactly the national average, according to complete figures from the Social Security Board just received by the State Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Benefits of $4,088,965 paid Oregon's jobless last year were 69.8 per cent of the contributions, which was the same ratio of taxes paid out by the 51 states and territories, totalling $518,700,423. Since benefits first became payable, Oregon's payments have been 76.4 per cent of collections, ranking 15th among the states and above the national average of 63.2 per cent.

In filling farm jobs, Oregon ranked 22d in complete placements with 5,203 for the year, while in supplemental placements, which include most of the seasonal harvest workers, Oregon was fourth. Only Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee exceeded this state's $5,441 harvest jobs filled through the employment service, mostly in temporary offices.

In complete placements with industries, offices, homes and farms, Oregon's rank among the 51 agencies was 23rd, as compared with a standing of 34th in population. The state's 23 employment offices filled 50,346 jobs lasting more than 30 days, according to reports to the Social Security Board.

With the defense program beginning to affect Oregon's industries, placements for 1941 to date have been running far ahead of last year while claims for benefits have dropped 25 per cent. New jobs filled in the first two and a half months of the year numbered 16,329 as compared to 9,761 for the same period last year, according to a report by L. C. Stoll, state employment director.

All unemployed are being urged to register at employment offices so that they may be called as new jobs are listed.

er, if distributed suitably among milk, cereals, vegetables, fruits, meat, eggs, body requirements will be adequately answered in the exact way nature desires them to be answered.

As every year goes by there is wider recognition of the fact that no child can get the best from his or her school days unless adequately fed. Children need more of the growth promoting materials such as are supplied in milk, fruits, vegetables and eggs, than the adult because he is building new body tissue all the time. So never skimp on these so-called protective foods. We must work these needed foods into family menus—and then see that the family eats them.

Heartiness is still the thing but we're serving it up in new forms and new flavors. Here is a dessert that combines cereal, fruit, milk, butter and eggs all in one dish.

Apple Indian Pudding
One fourth cup of yellow corn meal
Three cups of scalded milk
Three cups of sliced, peeled apples
One third cup of molasses
One half teaspoon salt
One fourth tsp powdered cinnamon
One fourth tsp powdered ginger
One third cup granulated sugar
One tablespoon butter
Two eggs, well beaten

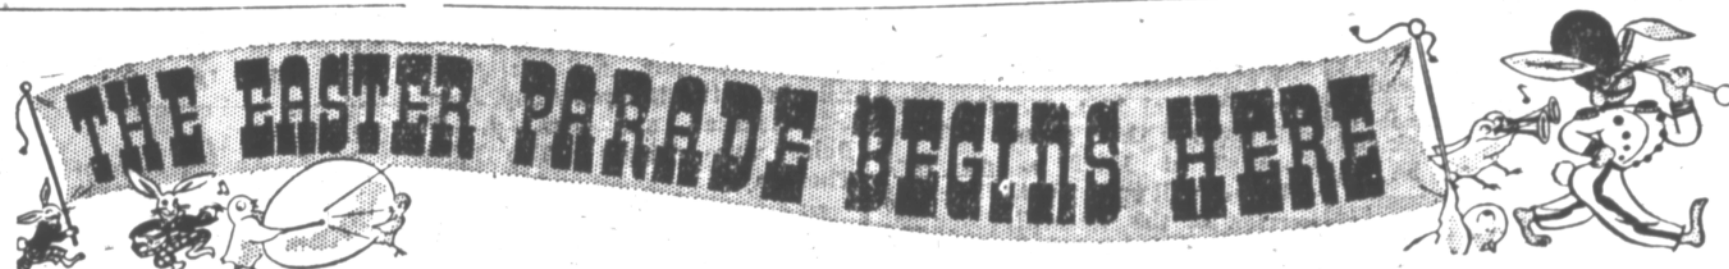

Add corn meal gradually to milk in a double boiler, while stirring. Cover, and cook over hot water 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. When done, remove from heat. Meanwhile, place apples in a sauce pan with 2 tablespoons of water; cover, and simmer until apples are tender but retain their shape. Arrange the apples in a buttered casserole. To the cooked cornmeal much add the molasses, salt, cinnamon, ginger, sugar and butter. Beat well with egg beater; then pour slowly over the beaten eggs, while stirring. Pour over Apples in casserole, and bake in slow oven of 275 deg. for about 1 hour, 35 minutes. Serve with cream. Serves six.

LOOKING AHEAD

Growing up is one long building process, from birth clear through adolescence. To get the job done right, and to maintain it in good shape thereafter, bones, teeth, muscles, vital organs, blood, and tissues must all have steady supplies of the materials they need for their particular task. Lack of one element or of several—vitamins and minerals are where most of us slip—can't be made up by an oversupply of starches and sweets. Nutrition failure during the formative period of life, if long continued, may result in damage which can never again be completely corrected.

Food intake, according to present day authorities, should be sufficient to maintain nutrition and energy at a plus level and to provide abundantly for growth and replacement of tissues. Although children vary widely in their fundamental food requirements, that is from quantity standpoint, balance in diet is always essential. Whatever quantity of food is tak-
