HI-WAYS TO HEALTH

by ADA R-MAYNE

OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

Are we, the people of the United States, well fed? That's a question that thinking men and women are asking these days. For no nation achieves total strength unless its citizens are well fed. Strong people make strong nations. And strong and alert people are built by abundant and well balanced diets.

Are we well fed? Here's the answer from Dr. Hazel K. Stiebeling, food economist of the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture: about one fourth of the families in the United States are apparently living on diets that can be rated good. That is, their diets furnish the kind and quantity of foods need to maintain the body, plus a margin of safety that enables them to stand up under the stresses and strains of living. More than a third of our families are getting fair diets - that is, just enough to keep them going, plus a slight margin of safety or no margin at all.

The rest are getting diets that should be rated poor. In one or more ways their diets are not furnishing even the minimum of all the food the body needs for good health. This means that some of these people are hungry; some have well defined deficiency diseases such as beriberi, scurvy, anemia, and pellagra; but more that that means that others having none of these clear cut symptoms are getting inadequate diets, suffering from them, and may not even know what's wrong. Inadequate diets may not put us to bed but they can destroy our sense of well being. They take their toll of chronic fatigue, in shifting aches and pains, and in certain kinds of digestive disturbances. They prevent a child's normal growth and development. And they lower natural resistance to infection.

Good management of a limited food budget and home grown "protective" foods can often make the difference between fair or poor diets and diets that are good. The first foods to be called protective were milk, and the green, leafy vegetables. They enrich diets in calcium, vitamins A and G, and high quality protein. Recent additions are foods rich in the vitamins of the B group, especially the less highly refined flours and cereals. Still others are fruits and vegetables rich in vitamins C - oranges, grapefruit, tomatoes, raw cabbage and others.

The Nation needs, according to the nutritionists of the Bureau of Home Economics, to consume at least ten to twenty per cent more milk and ten to twenty five per cent more butter - and correspond-

An American was defeated ignominiously when he ran for the office of sheriff. He got 55 votes out of a total of 3,500, and the next day he walked down Main Street with two guns hanging from his belt.

"You were not elected and you have no right to carry guns," fellow citizens told him.

"Listen, folks," he replied, "a man with no more friends than I've got in this county needs to carry guns."

JACK SATHER WINS HONOR AT OREGON STATE

Oregon State College, May 8.—Jack Sather of Kent, junior in agriculture at Oregon State college, as one of the 68 students pledged to Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society, this week.

Juniors, seniors and graduate students are chosen for Phi Kappa Phi, highest goal of scholastic achievement at Oregon State, on the basis of sound character, personality, scholastic achievement (ranking within the upper one-eighth of their class with no failures) and energy displayed in extra curricular activities. Juniors, selected among the highest ranking members of the class, will not be eligible for initiation until enrolled as seniors next fall.

New pledges were "tapped" as they entered the door of the men's gymnasium for honors and awards convocation, traditional way of notifying them of their selection as new members of the society.
