Named to FCA Board

Walter J. Robinson, Pomeroy, Washington, wheat, cattle and hog grower, has been named successor to the late Ervin E. King on the district board of directors of the Farm Credit Administration of Spokane. For eight years director of agriculture for the State of Washington, he has long been a leader in farm organizations and the farmers' cooperative movement. He was nominated for his new position by national farm loan associations of Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

Oregon Has Most Cold Storage Plants

Oregon ranks seventh among all states of the Union in the number of cold storage locker plants available for public use, according to a survey made recently by the Farm Credit administration, a report of which has just been received by Oregon State college.

This state has 164 locker plants with an average of 366 lockers per plant, or a total of 60,024 lockers. The average annual rental charged is $7.48 each. All northwest states rank among the first ten in locker numbers, Washington being second and Idaho ninth. In Oregon 67 per cent of the locker patrons are farmers.

The increased use of frozen food lockers has a relationship to national defense, according to S. T. Warrington, who made the survey for the FCA. Because most products are stored in either waxed paper cartons, this method saves tin, zinc, and other metals vital to the defense program. Furthermore, because most of the meat, fruits, and vegetables processed in locker plants are grown locally, more transportation facilities, central storage, refrigerator cars, and handling facilities can be released for emergency uses.

DUBIOUS ASSET

He had filed a petition in bankruptcy. The time came for him to be examined as to whether he should be declared a bankrupt. He rattled off a long list of liabilities and then he was asked what if any his assets were. "The only asset I can name," he announced, "is that I'm in my seventh week in a national puzzle contest."

MORE WHEAT LOANS

The amount of Oregon wheat placed under federal loan so far this year is already double the total amount for the entire year of 1940, the state AAA office announced.

Two thousand loans, totaling

$6,742,469 on 7,286,219 bushels of wheat, have been reported up to September 15 as approved by the Commodity Credit corporation.

Reports from the counties indicate that the flow of wheat under loan is continuing at a heavy rate and will continue until the market price equals or exceeds the 85 per cent of parity loan value.

AAA officials believe that well over half of Oregon's bumper wheat crop will move under loan, because of the high loan rate, made possible by growers cooperating to limit production under marketing quotas.
