Defense Bond Staff
Now War Bond Staff

The more dynamic designation "war" will replace the long familiar "defense" in the name of the U. S. Savings Bond Organization, according to word received here from Ray W. Conway, State Administrator for this branch of the Treasury Department.

From now on for the duration, the name will be "War Savings Staff," instead of "Defense Savings Staff," Mr. Conway said, and the local group will be known as the War Bond Savings committee.

The Department had hoped to retain the old name "Defense Savings Staff" until supplies of stationary and other material with the "defense" designation on it could be used up, but public demand necessitates the change immediately a communication from R. W. Sparks, Field Director for the Staff in Washington, stated.

U. S. Wheat Bins Are Full

World War II finds the United States well supplied with wheat, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. As the chart indicates, the supply is double that of 1917 when America entered the first World War. It is estimated that on July 1, the Nation's supply will be nearly 1 1/2 billion bushels, enough for two years of domestic use. Instead of plowing up new land and expanding wheat acreage, farmers are able to use land, labor, and equipment in turning out other war commodities more vitally needed—such as dairy, poultry, and meat products, vegetables, and oil crops.

Individuals finding cub bears or fawn deer in the woods apparently deserted by their mothers are requested to refrain from picking up such animals and taking them home as pets. Not only is this unlawful but in most cases the young have only been temporarily left behind while the doe deer or mother bear has gone off for food. While the young animals make nice pets, both deer and bear when grown often become dangerous to human life while held in captivity and eventually have to be killed.
