

130 Years Old, but Joins Scrap

Rejuvenation is in store for these cannons, which last saw service in 1812. The antiquated cannon, part of a ship's ballast, have already been turned into the scrap drive, and they may see action once again as barrels of new machine or anti-aircraft guns. The ancient guns were found in the hold of a vessel in Brooklyn.

Torpedoed U. S. Tanker Beats Raging Fire

When a tanker is burning as fiercely as this U. S. tanker (top photo) it usually must be abandoned. Despite this raging fire, caused by an Axis torpedo, crew members brought the flames under control. Below: The 18,000 ton tanker, a gaping torpedo hole amidships, stands by after the fire. It was towed to port by a U. S. navy ship and is now being repaired.

YOUR ELECTRIC SERVANT

★ The railroads of America are doing a great job these days, moving huge volumes of war materials and troops in record time. Helping the railroads in their vital task is low-cost electricity. On three of the Northwest's major railroad systems you'll find PP&L electricity doing such jobs as operating block signals, loading equipment, and the machinery in shops and roundhouses.

Important, too, is the fact that this helpful electric service is cheap! At Pasco, for example, two cents worth of PP&L power operates one of the world's largest turntables as it swings a giant mountain locomotive around, ready to go out again on the job of pulling the trains of war.

Helping operate railroads is just one of Pacific Power & Light Company's many war time jobs... it is busily at work on more than 12,500 farms, in food processing plants, in shipyards, airfields, army camps, and other war activities.

The same low-cost electricity that makes home life easier for you is helping make life tough for the Axis!
