a guest at the A. B. Christianson home.

The Carl Melzer boys have been staying in town this week in order to attend school. Jim Robinson, with whom they ordinarily come to school, has been unable to negotiate the snow-filled roads.

Mrs. Ella Thompson reports receiving the news that her grandson, Dean Thompson, joined the merchant marine last week and is now stationed at Catalina Island, California. Dean is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Thompson.

Mrs. John DeMoss returned Saturday night from Washougal, Wn., where she had been visiting her mother and her brother, Roy Dugger, both of whom have been ill. She was accompanied here by Mr. and Mrs. Melvie Jess of Hartline, Wn., who spent the night here before returning home. Mrs. Jess is Mr. Dugger's daughter.

Corporal and Mrs. Chester Coats left Saturday for Chicago after a few days' visit with relatives and friends in the county. Corp. Coats is doing instruction work in an air corps radio school, and Mrs. Coats has a position with Montgomery Ward & Co.

FURNISHINGS TO BE MADE OF SUBSTITUTE MATERIALS

Home may never have been quite like this, but soon Mrs. America may have skillets made from heat-resistant glass (these are already available), dust pans of paper board and molded fibre, and clothes hangers made from corrugated paper board. When storekeepers' inventories run low on civilian goods made from steel and other critical materials, certain substitutes may save the day for some articles which would otherwise be out. There is more wood furniture replacing metal furnishings, and wood also will be used for buckets, trays, washboards, and vegetable bins which have been made of metal. Glass, bone, and non-critical plastics also will be used for these articles.

CHANGES SHOULD BE POSTPONED, IS OPINION

Residents of Washington and Oregon are more than four to one in favor of postponing until after the war any change in the Pacific Northwest power set-up such as was proposed in the Bone-Smith Columbia Power Administration bill introduced in the last Congress, and are nearly two to one against such a program in any circumstances.

This was revealed by the announcement by Pacific Power & Light company of results of a public opinion survey conducted in the two states by Dan E. Clark II and Associates, research organization which has conducted several opinion surveys for newspapers. The power survey was made for a group of Pacific Northwest electric companies.

Dr. Chilton R. Bush, executive head of Stanford university's department of journalism and outstanding survey consultant, characterized the study as being "as painstakingly accurate as any I have had the opportunity of analyzing."

Other highlights of the survey included the showing that opinion in the two states is more than 11 to one in favor of the public ownership question being decided by vote of the local communities affected instead of by Congress.

The study also found that, by a five to one margin, the people in Washington and Oregon consider their present electric rates reasonable.

Direct interviews with a representative cross-section of people in the two states revealed only 13.7 per cent favorable to making a change in the northwest's power set-up now. In contrast, 63.3 per cent said they believed any change should be postponed until after the war. Twenty-three per cent expressed no opinion.

Basic question asked in the survey was: "Do you think this proposed Columbia Power Administration should or should not be given authority to buy or condemn and take over every electric power company in Washington and Oregon?"

Answers showed opinion nearly two to one against authorizing such power company take-overs. The division was as follows: Should 24.0% Should not 46.1% No opinion 29.9%

Cash Wheat Prices in Portland Little Changed

The cash wheat market at Portland maintained a generally steady tone during the week ended January 22, and prices at the close of the period showed but little change as compared with the previous week, the Department of Agriculture reports. Demand from mills was somewhat less urgent than during the previous week although they were in the market in a moderate way all during the period. Growers also were offering somewhat less freely this week, according to trade reports.

Lighter trading and movement was reflected in wheat receipts at Portland of only 81 cars during the seven days as against 212 the previous week, while receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals including Portland were only about 350 cars compared with 625 the week before. Mills reported new domestic flour business as only moderate, but sales for export under the indemnity plan were reported as fairly heavy during the period. Sales of Pacific Northwest wheat for rail shipment out of this area to the midwest were reported of less volume than during other recent weeks. Demand for feed wheat continued good, although most trading was in C.C.C. supplies. Possibility of ceilings being placed on wheat prices is causing some hesitation in current trading, according to trade reports.

Cash wheat bid prices on the Portland Grain Exchange, January 22 varied from $1.25 for soft white to $1.40 for 12% protein hard white (baart), prices being per bushel, bulk, No. 1 grade, 16-day shipment, Coast delivery.

Very low temperatures over-spread the northwestern wheat belt during the week, but most sections had a protective snow cover. In some districts, the cover was inadequate, but whether or not any damage occurred is not yet known. Some heaving occurred in southeastern portions of the belt from alternate freezing and thawing, but injury was not considered serious. In the south, conditions were favorable for winter grains, and local planting of spring oats was reported as far north as Oklahoma.

Reports through the week of January 16 showed 395,461,000 bushels of 1942 wheat under loan and approximately 233,250,000 bushels of earlier crops held by Commodity Credit corporation.

PROOF

A Missouri woman advertised for a husband. She got one at a cost of $9.00. He enlisted in the army and was killed. She got $3,000 insurance and a widow's pension for the rest of her life. And yet, some folks will tell you that advertising doesn't pay.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Quite a discussion some of the boys were having down at lodge meeting last night. Judge...you know, in the anteroom before the election of officers."
"Sure was...and Herb was dead wrong. The alcoholic beverage industry does account for more taxes than any other industry. I checked the figures in my office this morning. Why the figure on alcoholic beverages is pretty close to a billion and a half dollars a year. Lucky thing we haven't got prohibition or the government would have to raise up the money some other way. And there's only one answer to that—more taxes. You know what that would add up to?...about $25 more taxes a year for every man and woman in the country. In other words you and Sue would have to pay about $50 more in some form of tax. I guess about the only ones who'd come out ahead on that deal would be the bootleggers and gangsters."
