JAP BOMBS OF 1943

This is No. 1 in a series of 5 consecutive daily articles on the bombs now in actual use by our enemies, and the way to handle them. The Oregon State Defense Council emphasizes the fact that there is no assurance that some other type of bomb may not be used in any attacks made on the Pacific Coast but those pictured and described here are the most recent types used by the Japs on their fronts.

1 Kilo Jap Incendiary
The one kilogram incendiary bomb is pear-shaped and tapers toward the tail. It is 10 inches long and 3 inches in diameter and the body of the bomb is black while the tail fins are white and its nose is a hemisphere of rubber. When it is dropped it explodes and its fragments are like shrapnel and fly up to 50 yards. It scatters red phosphorus which will not re-ignite upon exposure to air as white phosphorus does, provided only that you extinguish the fire once. Used in dry forests or fields this type of incendiary material can be quite effective.

If the bomb lights in the open there will be a simple job involving a good deal of fast work. Following explosion, which occurs on impact, it will be necessary to cover each particle of phosphorus with water or with earth.

If the bomb explodes inside a building, water from a garden hose, pump tank, stirrup pump or thrown from a cup or other small container presents the best control medium.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"A lot of storekeepers in town are worrying about being able to get help these days, Judge. Men are mighty scarce and getting more so all the time."

"I know. Even the big companies are having quite a job getting them. Yep, and they need 'em too. Take the beverage distilling companies for example...they need a lot of manpower. Though they're not making whiskey any more, they're doing a 24-hour-a-day job of turning out alcohol for gun powder and synthetic rubber for the government."

"Makes me think back to the days before repeal when a powerful number of people were making liquor, too...only they were a bunch of law-flouting criminals doing it behind closed doors. And the government wasn't collecting a billion dollar excise tax either. Ever stop to wonder where the government could get all its war alcohol today if it weren't for the beverage distillers?"
