HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

Rationing is the fashion of the hour—and will continue to be in vogue for many days and months to come. With the rationing of meat and cheese comes the need for careful consideration of the sources of high quality protein. It should be remembered that milk is a protein food, the quart of milk furnishes from one-third to one-half of the daily protein need of a normal child or adult and these protein are of high quality for building and repairing body tissue. Today it is more necessary than ever to know how to alternate the available food sources of protein. Some restricted food may be made go farther by combining it with more readily available or non-rationed sources. Here again milk plays a leading role. By combining it with various meats and with cheese, the flavor of these less available protein foods can be extended.

Milk can be used as an extender or as a supplement for wide variety of foods such as cereals, fish, eggs, poultry, vegetables, meat. One way is to combine milk with rice in this Rice-Cheese Souffle or Eggs Baked with rice. Both of these recipes will make that limited amount of cheese do its greatest flavor duty.

Salt and cayenne

Combine butter, flour and milk. Cook over hot water until smooth and thick. Add well-beaten egg yolks and rice. Cook 5 minutes. Remove from fire and add cheese. Mix well until cheese is melted and add seasoning. Cool; fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into well-buttered casserole. Set in pan of warm water and bake in moderate oven (375) 20 minutes or until an inserted knife comes out clean.

Customers must not only be told of good things to buy, but how to buy them in these hectic war days.

The store that makes it easy for customers to buy will not only make more sales, but more important, will make more friends for the time to come when that will be paramount.

That is one reason why wise businesses, large and small, are advertising now---to prepare for the time when customers are hard to get.

Conditions then will be much different than now when it is merchandise that is hard to get.

They put their best foot forward, advertise their best quality or service. Such a policy will bear fruit when it is most needed.
