HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

The importance of building and maintaining good health can not be over-estimated today. America needs young people who are strong and self-reliant. More and more we are coming to realize that the food we eat is of the utmost importance to every day good health and living. With good food and well balanced meals to provide adequate nourishment, boys and girls grow straight and strong; their teeth are properly developed and maintained; their bodies are kept in the best possible physical condition; they are protected against certain diseases; and above all, they have abundant energy for work and play.

The first requirement for these young people is to learn as much as possible of the fundamentals of good nutrition—the difference between just eating and eating for fitness. They must learn to choose their food wisely. What constitutes a wise choice of food? Milk, vegetables, fruit and eggs are known as the protective foods. It is these foods which help to protect the body against disease and make for all around health. Well balanced meals are those built around this protective group of foods.

And of these protective foods, milk has long been considered the most important. It supplies an abundance of several of the nutritional elements needed by the body. Because of this milk is known as the body building food. It supplies protein which helps to build and repair body tissue. Through its butterfat it yields energy. Its minerals—calcium and phosphorus —help to maintain the body fluids so they can function normally and through its abundant supply of vitamins milk helps the body to resist colds and other infections, stimulates the appetite, and promotes good digestion. These are the reasons that milk is given first place in the protective food group.

To keep in step with Uncle Sam's army of healthy young people every boy and girl needs four glassfuls of milk every day. Part of this can be in the form of the ever popular ice cream. Because of necessary curtailment in production of ice cream during war time, we look about for extenders in other words ways to make the ice cream we get go farther. Here is one way we think you'll like. Fruit Whip Ice Cream

1 pkg. strawberry or raspberry flavored gelatin dessert
2 cups hot or boiling water
1 pint vanilla ice cream
Strawberries or raspberries or mint.

Dissolve gelatin dessert in hot or boiling water, following the manufacturer's directions. Chill until partially set; then beat with a fork. Beat in ice cream with a fork. Serve in sherbet glasses, garnished with strawberries, raspberries or a sprig of mint.

AAA Asks For Big Production This Year

Emphasis on production practices that will help Oregon farmers replace "manpower with horsepower" feature the 1944 AAA program recommendations of the farmer committeemen who administer the program in the state.

The state committee's recommendations, based on views of county committeemen and prepared with the assistance of a technical group of Oregon State college specialists, would encourage wider use of practices that will increase or maintain the per-acre war food production strength of Oregon farmers.

Special emphasis is asked for a group of practices that will increase production of forage crops needed to feed the state's record number of livestock.

These practices include seeding legumes and permanent pasture mixtures, construction of drainage and diversion ditches, pasture improvements and renovation, control of poisonous and destructive plants, and harvesting seed of forage crops.

The committee requested continuation of a second group of practices that would assist in maintaining production at present high levels. These include application of phosphate, sulfur, boron, mulching materials and lime; use of green manure crops, rodent control, reorganization of irrigation systems and construction of liquid manure tanks.

Continuation was also asked for a group of soil conservation and erosion control practices. While these practices do not result in immediate contributions to increased production, the committee believes that their abandonment would endanger conservation gains made in the past 10 years and also lead to a reduction in food production in future years.

News Laws Change Motor Rules

Oregon's new financial responsibility law became effective June 9, along with changes in four other motor vehicle laws enacted by the 1943 legislature.

1. The financial responsibility law which provides that persons involved in traffic accidents must be able to show proof of financial responsibility or their driver's licenses and registration plates will be revoked.

2. The repeal of the law requiring every driver to take the state driver's license examination every four years. Also repealed is the law requiring persons 70 or over who hold current licenses to take examinations for renewals.

3. The extension of the 1941-43 driver's license period through the following two years.

4. Reduction in the fee for medical care of indigent accident victims from fifty cents for two years to twenty five cents. This makes driver's licenses now cost $1.25 instead of $1.50.

5. The law permitting the moving of unlicensed vehicles from one point in the state to another for the flat fee of $1.00. Previously the fee for commercial vehicles was one-twelfth of the regular fee and for private vehicles $5.00.
