"MEMPHIS BELLE" GETS REPAIRS

The "Memphis Belle", battle-scarred veteran of nine months aerial warfare over France and Germany, now is "convalescing" at an air field in Spokane, Wn., according to the War Department. During 25 combat missions she was battered by flak and slashed by machine gun bullets. She has had nine new engines, a new right wing to replace one shot away in action, and a new tail assembly for one torn to shreds by cannon fire. This flying fortress was returned to the U. S. last June to show American people how American planes could stand up in modern warfare. Following her tour the flying fortress was assigned to a heavy bombardment group in Nebraska to help train fledgling airmen who hope soon to go overseas themselves. After a major overhaul job, the "Memphis Belle" again will be used in training airmen.

Straw Use Said Growing

Oregon farmers are making better use of pea and grain straw this year than ever before, according to observations made by OSC Extension and Soil Conservation service agronomists.

With the increased supply of legume straw in recent years, many growers have been able to see for themselves the big returns that come from returning this plant food to the soil. One Klamath Falls grower, for example, recently reported an increase of 50 sacks of potatoes per acre from turning under Austrian winter pea straw.

In areas of less than 12 inches of rainfall, which includes most of the wheat land in the Columbia basin counties, the conclusion has been reached that grain growers can use all of their wheat straw on the surface with no decrease in yield and with good erosion control.

With the advent of new tillage methods for keeping straw, stubble, and other crop residues near the surface, the old practice of burning these crop residues is strictly taboo among those who desire to carry out a type of farming which will keep the soil continuously productive.

Among the types of implements now in general use are plows with moldboards removed or partly cut off, one-way disks and similar machines, rotary sub-soilers, and rod and blade implements. All are designed to work leaving a stubble mulch to prevent either wind or water erosion.

Lost Ration Book May Be Returned

Under arrangements made with the Post Office department, finders of lost ration books may drop them in the mail without prepaying postage or enclosing them in envelopes, the OPA has announced.

On payment of a five cent post age due charge the Post Office will return the lost book to the person whose name and address appear on the cover. When the addressee cannot be found the Post Office will forward the book to the nearest rationing board.

"KEEP 'EM ROLLING"
THE RAILROADS ARE THE BACKBONE OF OFFENSE

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"You were absolutely correct in making the statement you did, George...not a drop of whiskey has been distilled in this country in over a year."
"That's what I told the boys down at the lodge, Judge, but they were so surprised I thought maybe I was wrong."
"No you weren't, George. The truth of the matter is that a year before Pearl Harbor, the beverage distilling industry voluntarily offered its facilities to the government. Many companies started to produce alcohol for war purposes almost immediately. And just as soon as the government's requirements increased, the distilling facilities of the entire industry were converted 100% to the production of war-alcohol and nothing else. As a matter of fact, the beverage distilling industry is producing about half of the government's needs for this vital war material. And that's a 24 hour a day, 7 day a week job, George."
"I'm glad I told you about my talk with Sam, Judge. You've given me a lot more facts on that subject."
