U. S. Marines on New Britain Island go places—roadways to their destination will be built later. Here they pick and fight their way from the beach to the airfield on Cape Gloucester. The invasion was staged during the tropical rainy season, which didn't improve traveling conditions.

Learning ABCs of Mines and Booby Traps

Now that the enemy are using more mines and booby traps than ever before, a school has been opened in Britain where units other than Royal Engineers can take a four-day course on our own and enemy mines and booby traps. Picture shows instructors watching students at work behind the Meascar Stocks, a device constructed so they can handle various types of mines and booby traps in the dark.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH
 by ADA R. MAYNE
OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

Keep an eye on calcium, is the advice to homemakers from nutritionists. This mineral, calcium, is a food value very likely to be short when a family's meals are otherwise up to good nutrition standards.

Ninety-nine percent of the calcium in the body is used in the building and repair of bones and teeth. The small remnant, the one percent does special jobs in the blood and nerves for the body's health and efficiency.

Since 1943 people in the United States have benefited by steadily getting more calcium, mainly because they have been using more milk in various forms. When civilian supplies are limited, as in the present war, civilians can do these things about it:

(1) Include as much milk and milk products in daily meals as wartime conditions permit, and waste none.

(2) Make good use of other sources of calcium. While milk is the number-one source and no other food is nearly so rich a "mine", greens from the garden will supply some calcium but should be considered as only supplementary to milk. Other foods which do their part toward the calcium supply include dried beans, soybeans, eggs, and molasses.

(3) Store up calcium by getting liberal amounts in food when possible. The body has a special storage place in the bone for extra supplies. If calcium-rich, the body makes use of its reserve for the strengthening of joints, and in time of calcium-need, the reserve is quickly available.

Wartime calls for meals planned more carefully than ever and the homemaker should remember in planning for this important mineral in the daily meals that cheese as well as milk will help provide the needed calcium.
