Silas Clay Gets Mad at Women's Hats

Silas Clay is complaining that his wife's new hat cost more than a bull calf. "And I wouldn't mind it, if it was a hat," he says, "but all it is, is a small bow and a piece of feather."

"It isn't the size of the hat that counts," says Bivon Earp, reproachfully.

"Well, what is it that counts?" asks Si, exasperated.

"I'll tell you what it is that counts," says Doc. "It's the lift that a new hat gives to any woman. It sort of picks up their spirits... boosts morale. Little things can do that. Like the flower in your buttonhole," he says to Silas, "or that glass of beer that you're enjoying."

From where I sit, Doc has given us a mighty good definition of morale. Important little things. A flower in your buttonhole... a kind word from a stranger... a mellow glass of beer with friends. Little things especially important in these days of strain.

YOU CAN'T EAT A CLIP OF CARTRIDGES

those bullets might save the life of some battle-weary boy on a far-flung front... those bullets that came through to him because you raised your own cabbage in your Victory Garden.

What's the connection between cabbages and cartridges? Just this: If you had not grown that head of cabbage but had bought it... it would have taken the equivalent shipping space, handling and labor necessary to ship a clip of cartridges overseas.

It's time we realize that Victory Gardens are more than merely a means of supplying ourselves with food, of saving points and money for ourselves.

Unless the civilian population takes care of its own food problem, they will have to use labor, fuel, transportation, storage and distribution facilities vital to the war effort.

Last year more than 40% of the food consumed by the civilian population of this country was grown in Victory Gardens. That's a great record. But this year it must be better.

So get out the shovel and the hoe... and DIG IN NOW... FOR VICTORY!

Plan your garden so as not to waste seeds, fertilizers, spray and other materials.

Plan your time. A successful garden must have regular care; it is not an odd moment's job.

Plan to preserve your surplus produce. Arrange to "put up" a portion of your crop for winter use.

Plan right... get expert advice. Don't leave anything to chance. Write for these FREE publications listed at left written for Oregon Victory Gardeners.
