BOYS AVAILABLE

The supply of boys from 14 to 17 years old wanting full-time work on Oregon farms this summer is considerably higher than the present demand from farmers, reports J. R. Beck, state farm labor supervisor for the OSC extension service.

Many more boys actually have applied for the special farm training short course sponsored at OSC by the state farm labor office than can be placed on the basis of present requests from farmers, Beck says. The second of these brief farm training periods is in session this week at Corvallis.

Shift Generals

Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, above, replaces Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton Jr., who commanded the Seventh U. S. Army in Sicily, the war department has announced. General Patton has been assigned to command another army, name of which has not been revealed. General Patch has commanded army forces on Guadalcanal.

"Most of these boys are either right off of farms or have had some farm experience," Beck says. "The training they get at OSC is not complete, of course, but they are given helpful pointers in tractor driving, dairy work, chores and general farm work. They should be quite a help to a farmer hard pressed for someone to work around the place."

Requests for these boys may be made through the county farm labor employment office or directly to Russel M. Adams, assistant state farm labor supervisor at Corvallis.

WASHING MACHINES FIRST

Demand for consumers durable goods and appliances today is close to levels immediately preceding the war, but a large number of families intend to use savings for buying or building a house before purchasing durable goods. William Y. Elliott, WPB Vice Chairman for Civilian Requirements made this fact public in announcing results of Office of Civilian Requirements third nationwide survey of consumer requirements. Among eleven appliances covered in the survey, washing machines are now in greatest demand, with electric irons and mechanical refrigerators in close second and third positions. Other items covered in the order of present consumer preference, were cooking stoves, electric toasters, radios, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, heating stoves, electric fans and water heaters. It is impossible to predict when domestic sewing machines may be made for civilians. No large scale resumption of bicycle production will be possible until the war in Europe has been brought to a successful conclusion. Distributors serving farm and other essential civilians users may replenish flashlight battery inventories by applying for preference ratings.

Wherever Uncle Sam's fighting forces are to be found, ice cream is the favorite of foods. Just as nearly as possible ice cream is made available to all of them, because it is not only one of the best of all foods, but it has also proved of inestimable value in the maintenance of the fighters' morale.

Most of the important warships are equipped with fountain service which is equally popular among the officers and the enlisted men. Early in the war, Navy officials recognized the importance of ice cream in the maintenance of the spirit of the sailors and availed themselves of every opportunity to develop this vice as well as using it regularly and generously at meal time. And Navy menus don't just happen! Every food included in the diet of Navy personnel, ashore or afloat, is there for a purpose. Highly skilled and trained technicians know every condition under which the men live—and make their requirements—and make sure exactly what each food will do for those men before it is approved.

That is why it is significant that ice cream ranks so high on Navy menus. It is not only a favorite food, but it also supplies valuable vitamins, proteins, and minerals. For that reason, where ever practical, the Navy gets its ice cream.

Ice cream is not as plentiful today for civilians as it was before the war because of this shortage with our armed forces. You may, for a while, see a bit more than over the last few months.

At home, at service centers, at camp and station, with the Army and with the fleet, ice cream serving in its rightful place in helping to maintain the health and morale of the nation.
