AN ELECTRIC HIGHWAY 2530 MILES LONG

Through the valleys and across the plains stretch mile after mile of rural power lines, bringing low-cost dependable PP&L electricity to more than 14,000 Pacific Northwest farms. This network of rural lines, under development since 1910, helps make our agricultural region one of the most highly electrified in the nation.

Even though Washington and Oregon have more than their share of vast distances and wide open spaces, they stand eighth and ninth among the 48 states in percentage of electrified farms.

More than 80% of Washington and Oregon farms are electrified. By comparison, Tennessee, in the heart of the much publicized Tennessee Valley Authority, has only 25% of its farms electrified.

Today PP&L continues to connect up farms in this rapidly growing region—as fast as the supply of scarce line materials will permit.

SOUND BACKING FOR A BIG BUSINESS

Today, as in the earliest days of Oregon's history, residents of the state depend heavily upon agriculture for prosperity. It is the state's leading source of income.

The future promises extensive development in agriculture. The United States National Bank, with its substantial resources, stands ready to help Oregon's farmers and ranchers share in this progress.
