Now that summer is well under way more family meals will be served out of doors. Whether you picnic in your own backyard or whether you drive to a favorite spot will make no difference whatsoever so far as appetites are concerned. There is something about eating out-of-doors that is stimulating to one's appetite and every day foods seem to take on special appeal and interest. The family will find it a pleasant change.

The picnic meal should be as carefully planned as any other meal to include foods which are nutritious as well as being easy to serve out-of-doors with a minimum of preparation. After all, the homemaker should be able to enjoy the picnic along with the rest of the family and should not have to spend too much of her time with its preparation.

A hot dish might easily be the center of interest for the meal. Serve with a crisp tossed salad of summer vegetables and greens bread and butter, plenty of cold milk, and the ever-popular favorite ice cream for dessert. This adds up to a complete meal and whether served at home or on a picnic would satisfy anyone's hunger.

If your family is one that enjoys cooking over a camp fire, Kabobs would be fun. These are made by alternating cubes of lamb and onion on a stick and roasting over the camp fire until cooked. A frankfurter version of kabobs might be easier to prepare. Make a lengthwise split part way through frankfurters and insert a wedge of cheese. Press together and wrap with bacon, fastening the ends with

"You don't have to swing to kill that pesky thing!"

Flies, mosquitoes, moths and other similar insects (with or without wings) take a permanent nose-dive when they run into a whiff of Standard Fly Spray. Used as directed, it won't stain your finest materials, it has no unpleasant odor, and it's harmless to human beings. It not only gets rid of pest parents, it also destroys their eggs and larvae—before insects are born.

And use Standard Animal Fly Spray to get rid of flies on milk cows—and as a general insecticide for all animals.

Comparative Prices Lower On Many Crops

Compared with a year ago, the exchange value is lower, especially for hay, potatoes, truck crops as a group, and for poultry and eggs. Dairy products, meat animals and wool are also somewhat lower in purchasing power. Wheat, corn and other grains were higher at mid-May in exchange value as well as in money prices, reflecting government buying to meet overseas relief demands.

Actually, the parity index has risen far less than farm operation expenses in dollars. Whereas the parity index of prices paid rose only 40 percent from 1939 to 1945, Oregon's actual farm operation expenses practically doubled to reach near 160 million dollars. A part of the difference is accounted for by the need to increase expenses in meeting the war-food goals calling for production about one-third above the prewar volume.

Currently, most of the increase in farm costs is occurring in prices for commodities needed by farmers for production. These goods include many items that together represent about six-sevenths of the prices that are included in the parity index. Taxes and interest account for the other seventh. Family living expense is not included in the parity index, but this is up 12 percent in the past year.
