GRANGERS SHAPE THE PATTERN of OREGON'S DEVELOPMENT

Thirty thousand people who know where they're going can do a lot of good for themselves and for the state in which they live.

There are 30,000 members of the Grange in Oregon. They and their families are members of some 400 local Granges throughout the state. They conduct regular, well-attended meetings. They own Grange halls. They have millions of dollars invested in farms and equipment. They are alert to social, agricultural and civic betterment.

They are members of an organization nearly as old as the state of Oregon. They work here, live here, dream here—for the constructive programs that shape the pattern of Oregon's development. Not just for their benefit, but for the good of all Oregonians.
