HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

BUTTER FOR FLAVOR

Nothing can replace the delicious flavor of butter. Good cooks have always known that its unique flavor cannot be imitated. "But I can't afford to feed my family butter," a homemaker may say. You can, madame, that you cannot afford not to feed your family butter. And here are the reasons why.

Butter is an easily-digested food fat (scientific experiments show butter to be 97.8% digestible). It is rich in Vitamin A, which promotes growth and builds up resistance against infection and disease. Oregon butter averages about 16,500 International Units of Vitamin A per year. This is a pretty fine average and compares favorably with butter statistics from other parts of the nation. Did you know that the butterfat from ten and a half quarts of milk is needed to make a single pound of butter? Think of it this way: the returns on the purchase of a pound of butter may be figured in terms of economy. Rich returns from money expended; vitamin content—reliable and stable; food fat—satisfying yet easy to digest; and flavor—rich and delicious!

In using butter, remember that if it is softened and creamed it will spread more easily and go farther. Saves time too. When the supply of butter is not as plentiful as usual, use it where its flavor counts—as a spread, on vegetables, or on pancakes or waffles. If the family is fond of French toast, a pitcher of warm maple syrup and melted butter combined is a delicious topping—and the butter goes farther this way.

When cooking with butter it is wise to avoid high cooking temperatures. Butter has a low melting and smoking temperature and only requires gentle heat. When used as a seasoning it's best to add the last minute before serving.

Butter should be kept in a tightly-covered container in a cold dark place, protected from strong odor foods. Like other dairy products, butter has a characteristically mild sweet flavor that absorbs strong odors and flavors if improperly stored.

Here is a recipe for yeast doughnuts made with butter that will appeal to doughnut fans everywhere.

Yeast Doughnuts

2 cups milk, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup butter, 1 cake yeast, 1/2 cup warm water, 2 eggs, 6 cups flour.

Scald milk and pour over sugar, salt and butter. Cool to lukewarm and stir in yeast, which has been dissolved in the water. Add beaten eggs and about 4 cups of flour; beat until smooth. Let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk; then beat for five minutes and let rise again. Add rest of flour. Roll out on well-floured board, cut out with doughnut cutter or form in twists and place on lightly floured pan to rise. When doubled in size, fry in deep fat about 350 degrees (hot enough to brown a 1-inch cube of bread in 1 minute until golden brown on both sides. Drain on absorbent paper and sprinkle with sugar. These are best served when warm. Makes 3 dozen doughnuts.

Sure as shootin', if there's Old Man Dirt in your Diesel fuel, there's trouble ahead. Every drop of fuel goes through injector-nozzle holes small as a human hair. And if these injectors get dirt-worn, that does it, brother. Cuts the power of your Diesel and leads up to repair bills. ### GRANGERS SHAPE THE PATTERN of OREGON'S DEVELOPMENT

Fruits, nuts and berries meant $46,475,000 to Oregon in 1945. They meant a lot more than that to Grangers. The dollars-and-cents estimate by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics represents hard cash put into circulation by the state's orchardists and berry growers. It also represents another substantial industry to support the long-standing Grange position that the stability of Oregon's economy depends upon sound, diversified agriculture.

The Grange takes pride in counting 30,000 progressive Oregon farmers among its members. They are bound together in the cause of better agriculture. To this end, because it benefits all the people, they are shaping the pattern of Oregon's development.
