Barnums, Henry, Lester and Mrs Giles French got together Monday night for their annual birthday dinner occasioned by all three having been born on April 13 and 14. Mrs French was hostess for the dinner.

Mr and Mrs Harry Pinkerton went to Corvallis last week upon receiving word that their son,

ARMS OF VITAMIN C... The little girl with her arms full of vitamin C, is "Sissy" MacCalla, Winter Haven, Fla., who entered the giant fruit in the biggest grapefruit contest of the Florida Citrus exposition which started February 17, and attracted national attention.

Dean, was ill. He underwent an appendectomy from which he is recovering.

The Sherman County Riders will meet Sunday at the fair grounds for the first ride of the season, which will be a trip up Grass Valley canyon. A pot luck dinner will be prepared at the destination of the group. Anyone may come who is interested in riding.

A week of bright sunshine, unduly warm for mid-April ended Wednesday night in a small rain storm, which, however, did little to change the warmth of the atmosphere. Crops look good although there is the usual criticism that some are too thin, some are too thick, some too early and some too late, all of which may prove to be either a handicap or an asset before harvest time. Should there be rain in June (an inevitable dry farming prayer) there will be elevator-full of wheat in August in all probability.

Miss Jean Haan, former teacher in the Moro schools and at Madras this year, was married Sunday in The Dalles to Ted Hewlett, a brother of Mrs Earl Rehr.

The Embarrassment of Success...

EVERY NOW AND THEN a manufacturer succeeds in making a product so outstanding that public demand for it overwhelms production facilities. In his zeal for winning friends he finds himself making enemies — people eager to buy who cannot be assured immediately or even early delivery.

Thus, the earnestness the manufacturer has given to years of research and development — of product improvement and still-better product performance — of efficient manufacture and unusual customer service . . . seems to come back to haunt him.

It is the embarrassment of success. In becoming the world's leading manufacturer of Diesel engines, track-type tractors and motor graders, "Caterpillar" found many buyers forming a waiting line during the years when all products went into war use. To that waiting line were added many more whose favor was won by the illustrious war performance of these machines.

Thus, despite the fact that "Caterpillar" production is at a high point, demand is still outmatching supply. To catch up — and also to provide an extra margin of facilities for future needs — production is being increased as rapidly as possible by an expansion program that is adding 50 per cent more plant.

"Caterpillar" is deeply conscious of the problems of users who prefer and patiently wait for "Caterpillar" products. "Caterpillar" thanks every customer for such patience in awaiting his turn on deliveries. You can be sure that "Caterpillar" effort is the human utmost. It is live, resourceful — determined that, even in the face of material shortages and disturbed economic conditions, there shall be no unnecessary delays.
