What Soil Structure Will Grow Best Crops?

From 32 inch single sweep size to 13 foot five sweep size Large size tractors pull several units of these 8 foot and 11 foot plows.

FOR MAKING stubble mulch, to save moisture and to prevent soil drifting on dry land, operate at three inches to six inches in depth.

FOR PREVENTION of water erosion and for control of bad weed pests, operate at approximately nine inches. SOILVATOR can be adjusted to plow twelve inches or more in depth.

FOR CHISELING, remove sweeps and install chisel points on each curved plow beam.

Black Fallow: Years ago "Black Fallow" meant no weeds. If your summer fallow was almost free from weeds you might have been called a good farmer. Good farmers soon discovered that too much work made the soil too fine. Cheney's Rod Weeder killed more weeds and made less fine soil. Our circulars for many years used the slogan, "Save The Lumps". This was found good advice. Less work and better crops resulted.

Stubble Mulch: Farmers have known for many years that stubble and trash on the surface saved moisture and helped prevent soil erosion by either wind or water. This type of tillage has increased tremendously during the past few years. SOILVATOR, Cheney's Under Surface Plow does not turn the soil over but does make an ideal broken lumpy mulch covered by stubble and other vegetation on the surface. It operates from shallow depths to twelve inches or more. There are many sizes for the various size tractors DEMONSTRATIONS CAN BE SEEN AT: the FAY BRACKETT, J. R. YOCUM and H. HOLZAPFEL FARMS.

4,000 More "Tailors" for Reddy Kilowatt

When Reddy Kilowatt comes shooting across the country on those big PP&L transmission lines he's 69,000 volts strong. Before he can be used in your home he has to be "tailored" down to 120 or 240 volts to fit your needs. A transformer acts as the tailor. This year PP&L plans to install more than 4,000 transformers. Some of them—the big transmission type—will cost as much as $100,000 each. Our 1948 construction budget is the largest in history.
