In this growing region... Every Kilowatt Counts

Be thrifty in the use of hot water from your electric water heater. You'll save money, and you'll be helping to save kilowatts. That's important, for enormous growth in industry and population has increased the demand for electricity. Peak power needs here in the Pacific Northwest have jumped 1,448,000 kilowatts, or 57%, since the end of the war. Every unit of electricity has a big job to do, so use it wisely. Save money and be comfortably supplied with hot water by following the tips listed below. You'll also be saving electricity for a fast-growing Pacific Northwest.

HOW TO SAVE... Be sure water taps are turned off tight. Replace worn washers. Stopping drips saves water, also saves your hot water supply. Set the dial control on your automatic water heater at temperature consistent with your needs. Most homes don't need water hotter than hot. Use only as much hot water as you need for bath, shower, washing clothes. Heaters must work harder to bring temperature of cold water up again, after tank is drained.
