VOCATIONAL SCHOOL GROWS

Oregon vocational school at Klamath Falls has grown in 15 months from two classes and 35 students to an institution which today numbers approximately 500 men and women in 29 varied courses of craft and business training. Ninety percent are World War II veterans and half of them are married.

This was reported by O. I. Paulson, state director of vocational education, to the Oregon Department of Veterans Affairs this week following the completion of 15 months of successful operation of the state's newest and biggest vocational school.

Growth of the school has been 25 percent more than was anticipated, Paulson said. Experts predicted that about 400 would enroll in the first year of operations, and 500 odd the second year. The school budget was set up on this estimate. Paulson said he expects enrollment in the second year to exceed 600, judging from current growth.

Winston D. Purvine, the school director, reported that the 421

The peak enrollment, Purvine said, was last April 15, when 515 students were reported in the average daily attendance. Most popular courses at Klamath Falls are diesel mechanics, auto mechanics, auto body and fender repair, gunsmithing and

All over Oregon open-minded people are asking: Why Require Purchase of a Bottle? LEGALIZE LIQUOR BY THE GLASS!

In a scientific, state-wide survey recently completed, a reliable public-opinion research organization, which has accurately forecast the results of many Oregon elections, finds that "a majority of those who have heard of the measure (liquor-by-the-glass) would presently vote for its passage."

This confirms a similar state-wide survey, made last spring, which found 46% of Oregon's citizens in favor of liquor-by-the-glass and 44% insisting on purchase of liquor-by-the-bottle only.

It is a fact that whenever open-minded citizens or organizations have studied the measure without prior prejudice, they have found reasons for supporting this measure and no legitimate reasons for opposing it.

The Retail Trade Bureau of the Portland Chamber of Commerce says, in an authorized statement: "This Bureau is on record, through its membership, favoring amendment to the Knox Law which would permit the sale of drinks in hotels and clubs, over the bar. The reason for our taking this action is the belief that it would encourage temperance and would not necessitate individuals buying a whole bottle and consuming it immediately, if an individual drink could be purchased."

The Oregon State Federation of Labor is on record with the following resolution: "Whereas, the present system of liquor control in Oregon is not good and results in imposition of unreasonable regulations upon citizens who desire to consume alcoholic beverages, and, whereas, the sale of alcoholic beverages in hotels and restaurants and other public places should be lawful without the possession of club licenses; therefore it is resolved that the Oregon State Federation of Labor will join with any other responsible groups who initiate the change of the present law to permit the free and open sale of beverages of alcoholic content by responsible licensed businesses without the present cumbersome restrictions."

On February 21, 1948, Oregon's largest newspaper, The Oregonian, said editorially: "The privilege of buying liquor by-the-drink would be appreciated by tourists, many of whom complain of the present system. It would encourage hotels, restaurants and entertainment clubs to improve their facilities. But without considering these benefits to business, one also may hope for a decline in drunkenness in public places and rapid diminishment of bootlegging if there is licensing and strict control of legitimate outlets for sale of liquor by-the-drink."

Seth F. Harper, superintendent of the State Liquor Dispensary in our neighboring state of Idaho, in a letter dated August 26, 1948, said: "I am certain that with the high license and bond, careful state regulations regarding the sale of liquor, and a good enforcement operation, sale of liquor by-the-drink can be a decided factor in a temperate regulation of the use of alcoholic beverages."

EVEN ITS FRIENDS WILL ADMIT THE KNOX LAW IS FAR FROM PERFECT!

C. C. Chapman, of The Oregon Voter, has been critical of this measure for reasons of his own, but in the issue of August 7, 1948, he has this to say: "Oregon's Knox Law seemed the best way to compromise between prohibition and the saloon. It has worked out fairly well. Under it there have been no centers for drinking of hard liquor except the home, the licensed club or the licensed establishment to which the purchaser could take his own bottle and have service of his own liquor. Conditions have not been satisfactory to anyone, but they have approached a moderate acceptability."

In a recent published statement, Mrs. Ruth E. Tooze, state president of the W.C.T.U., typical of the organizations working against the liquor-by-the-glass measure, said: "Let me emphasize again that the Oregon Women's Christian Temperance Union is now, as in the past, opposed to all liquor sales, whether they are sales by-the-glass, or sales by-the-bottle through the state liquor control system operating under the Knox law or any other law."
