NEXT OF KIN MAY GET

RETURN OF INCOME TAX

Next of kin of veterans who died in active service any time between December 7, 1941 and December 31, 1947, and who paid federal income tax for any year or part of a year they were in service, are eligible for a refund of those taxes, the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs said today.

Public Law 367 of the 80th Congress in providing for tax abatement sets December 31 of this year as the deadline for refunds on incomes prior to 1945. For 1945 and subsequent incomes, such claims may be filed any time within three years after tax return was filed. This would make March 15, 1949 the deadline for claiming a refund on 1945 income taxes.

Why Power Conservation between 4:30 and 6:30 P.M.

Q. Why is "peak" power conservation necessary?

A. The Pacific Northwest has been growing faster than big new generating plants can be built. Power demands now equal the full capacity of all plants in the Northwest Power Pool, and will exceed capacity of the Pool during the winter season ahead unless everyone cooperates to save electricity over the daily peak hours of use.

Q. What are the "peak" hours of power use?

A. At this season, the greatest demand for power occurs between 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m., because it is getting dark earlier every day, and lights are being turned on everywhere while stores, offices and factories are still operating.

Q. Do I need to conserve at times other than these peak hours?

A. No. You can still use whatever electricity you need before 4:30 p.m. and after 6:30 p.m.

Q. How can I as a housewife help save power during peak periods?

A. By reducing electric heating to an absolute minimum between 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.; by planning meals which require less use of range elements or oven during peak hours; by doing all washing and ironing before 4:30 p.m. or after 6:30 p.m.; by turning off all lights not actually needed between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Q. How can business firms help during the critical period?

A. By turning off unessential lights between 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.; by planning use of motor-driven equipment during off-peak hours, wherever possible; by limiting or eliminating display and sign lighting between 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.; and by making it a daily habit to watch for any other possible savings of electricity during the peak period.

Q. What are industrial users of electricity doing to help minimize the effects of the peak power deficiency?

A. Industrial plants throughout the Pacific Northwest are cooperating in many different ways to help with this regional problem. Some are changing their working hours. Others are rescheduling their use of power-driven machinery. Industry is doing its full part.

Q. Is the conservation program uniform throughout the Northwest?

A. Yes. Every power system in the region is following the same general program, because the problem is the same everywhere. But each individual user of electricity knows best how he can do his part in the program. You may best be able to save electricity in one way, your neighbor in some other way. THE ESSENTIAL THING IS TO ACCOMPLISH THE SAVING! If everyone does his bit in this voluntary program, the necessary result can be accomplished without serious inconvenience to anyone. Otherwise, an overload will pile up and then only one thing can happen—a general breakdown of a vital public service!

Q. How important is it for me to do my part in the conservation program?

A. No matter how small your own saving may appear to you, remember that there are about one million users of electricity in this region, and the whole success of this program depends upon EVERYONE doing his share. The person who turns off an unneeded 100-watt lamp bulb during the peak hours is playing just as necessary a part in the conservation program as the industrial plant which arranges to run a 1000-horsepower motor at some other time than between 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.
