GEORGE AIKEN
In the death of George Aiken the state of Oregon lost one of its best public servants.

As befits a Scotchman he was economical and thus well fitted to be budget director. Few men have had as complete an understanding of state government as George Aiken and few have worked so hard to make state government successful.

DAYLIGHT SAVING
The action of the city of Portland in declaring daylight saving immediately after the legislature had passed and the governor had signed a bill that restricts daylight saving, shows a good bit of arrogance.

on the same schedule as adjoining states and then daylight saving is to be inaugurated all over the state at once, not city by city. It is the variation between cities and communities that does the damage to business and to nerves of citizens.

Portland, of course, is relying on the home rule amendment of some years back to maintain its position. That and the fact of the vote in favor of daylight saving given last fall by a small majority is it known.

INDIAN VILLAGE
The federal government, tired perhaps of planning the lives of white citizens, has embarked on a plan to plan the lives of their words, the Indians. For one, we feel sorry for the Indians, who incidentally are feeling sorry for themselves.

For at least one generation sob sisters, amateur and professional and of both sexes, have been saying that the Indians should not live in shacks through which the west wind blows freely, should not dry their salmon in the sun nor cast the offal where it offends the tender nostrils of more particular citizens.

tracks and is said to be the fore-runner of a crew of builders. Contemplated are nice, neat little cottages for the permanent residents, some sanitary drying sheds and some tent bases for temporary residents who come from Warm Springs and Yakima for the fishing.

Well, what's coming next. The government says through its tax policy that some people can't live so well and then it takes the money and says to the Indians that they must live better. The trouble is that the Indians don't care about it and the tax payer does.

It seems that if the Indian wants to live in an air ventilated shack it should be his inalienable right to do so. Where bathing facilities are unhandy a good fresh breeze is an asset, and where fish are being dried it is a necessity.
