HEADLESS ROOSTER . . . Mrs. Martha Green's remarkable rooster, to whom decapitation didn't matter very much, is shown putting away a tidy breakfast of egg yolk and warm milk. This is rather interesting when one stops to realize that the rooster has been without a head for several days. Mrs. Green was the most surprised shopper in Los Angeles when the beheaded bird she had bought at a meat market started squawking as soon as she got it home.

SALEM, April 20—An Opportunity Bond drive quota of $51,500 was assigned to Sherman county at Salem last night at a Governor's banquet climaxing a day of preparations for Oregon's participation in a six-week campaign.

E. C. Sammons, president of the United States National bank, joined Mr. Truman and Governor McKay in their plea for generous support of the campaign. Sammons pointed out that savings bonds represent a "tremendous cushion in our own Oregon communities to absorb the impact of any financial emergency". He said they play a powerful role in sustaining community credit when business is hit by shut-downs in the woods, canneries and other industries.

Women Drivers Have Good Record.

Note to men who blame our traffic problems on women drivers —

In Oregon last year, according to Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry, men outnumbered women as drivers in fatal accidents by 13 to one. The year before it was 11 to one.

So what, you say? Men drive more than women. Doesn't prove a thing—unless we see that the accidents of housewives are less likely to be fatal than those of any other occupation group. If Mother is driving when an accident occurs, the odds are 631 to one against death, more than double the 260-to-one odds for all drivers.

Students have the worst accident severity record, closely followed by farmers and laborers. Only professional and business men approach the housewives in this safety comparison.

As a further sidelight, Newbry adds that men are also more likely to be killed in pedestrian accidents. While only twice as many men are injured, four times as many are killed. And still we say "the weaker sex"!

Clean-up Suggested For Moro Town

Suggestion has been made that Moro have a clean-up day.

Some organization interested in making the town look better, or at least fresher, might initiate such a movement. The city officials don't want to because a clean-up day to be successful should be a spontaneous movement of citizens without governmental management of direction. Citizens do better than government.

There's not much time. Who wants to lead it?

BRIEF INTERLUDE . . . Pretty Linda Carson of Reno staged a brief sidwown strike when a non-intervale airline refused to sell her a ticket from San Francisco to Los Angeles. She was persuaded by police to move.
