THE DALLES BRIDGE

News reports were not complete about the highway commission's approval of the petition of Wasco county for permission to build a toll bridge across the Columbia. The state has donated $3,000 to the pool that was used for a survey and Wasco county people gave $16,000 it was said.

The question still remains as to how much more the state is going to donate to the construction of the bridge.

Reports of the proposed means of financing are rather fantastic even for this era of low respect for the dollar (which used to be called "Almighty", remember? J. Rufus Wallingford might have dreamed it up were he in circulation.

If stories are true, The Dalles, through some of its citizens who must be wasting their talents in so small a town, has convinced an eastern bonding house to advance the money to build a $2,000,000 bridge across the river and to take no security but the tolls. Considering the history of other Columbia river toll bridges, especially those not on a major north and south highway, it sounds like the Cello village smells.

If this is correct, and The Dalles has read the fine print and not found that the county or city or state will be liable in case of default, the city is to be congratulated. We didn't know there were any more people like that in the world and we'll dig up a couple of our grandiose schemes for their approval.

But a bridge across the Columbia will be a fine thing for all who have a desire to cross the river at that point. It will serve The Dalles area well and no doubt bring some Saturday business to the merchants.

A STRAIGHT ROUTE 30

August 20 Governor McKay will formally open and dedicate a portion of the new Columbia River Highway. It is a straight road saving many miles in turns and many words in tempo. Everyone has seen it and wished he were on it.

Upper Columbia residents for years have been wishing for a faster route to Portland and now it is here and the old, crooked, tree lined road is to be given over to the Sunday drivers and the sight seers who have helped keep it slow for years.

When finished to The Dalles the new road will halve the time needed between the two cities. Sherman countians can get to Portland in two hours or less.

What will be the results? We can remember how easy it was to get to The Dalles after the Sherman highway was built in 1923. The economic changes brought about by that road are remembered by everyone over 30 years of age. When there is a good road to go on, people go.

If one might hazard a prophecy the new highway when completed will be one of the busiest roads in Oregon. It will be filled with freight trucks hauling stock to market and with cars taking people to the city to trade. There will be many accidents on its straight stretches and it will be less safe than the present road.

But some way it is hard to enthuse over it. Elimination of the 200 full turns on the present highway has been wanted so long the promise of victory seems delayed beyond desire. Perhaps, like other things fought for, the end battle brings as much sadness as elation.

Fall suits in the new shades. Sharkskin and Gabardines.

These telephone men will soon make a damaged long distance cable carry calls again. Come along and see how.

THEY GET GOING FAST WHEN TROUBLE STRIKES

Telephone repairmen's big job is keeping your calls moving

1. When someone's ditch-digger bites a chunk out of a long distance cable—and it happens now and then—repairmen get on the job fast to fix it. Back at a test center, sensitive instruments located the break and splicers hit the road. Almost simultaneously, many calls were routed through other cities to get them through with as little delay as possible.
2. Service restored...the hundreds of tiny wires have been spliced temporarily and, even as the workmen stow their tools, calls are speeding through the cable. Later it will be permanently spliced without interrupting service. Such fast repairs are possible by planning ahead for emergencies, so trained people can be quickly pulled from other jobs.

3. Keeping service reliable makes your telephone a more valuable servant—just as keeping rates low as possible makes service a bargain today. A local call still costs just a few pennies...and calls to the East Coast at day station rates only $2.50 plus Federal tax.

Your telephone is one of today's biggest bargains
