THE LOSS OF CHINA

Wheat farmers of the northwest have an especial interest in the recent action of the state department in deciding to forget China. That means that the Communists won the China battle and presumably that we will soon be crowded out of Korea and Japan.

Apparently this nation spent enough money on China but spent it unwisely and at 'unfortunate' times. We advocated recognition of the Chinese Reds and fought with the Gissimo and were generally on the wrong side or both sides until we were defeated.

To wheat growers the loss of China means a smaller market for wheat. It is true that Chinese have often been unable to pay for wheat, but no other nation has been importing grain at its own expense either. In recent times, and as long as the super-generous attitude prevails in the state department, being broke is no bar to eating well among nations. So we can pass on China's inability to pay. That is old fashioned, reactionary, shall we say. Here in the northwest we can and do grow some 90 million bushels of wheat and can ordinarily put away about 35 million of it in feed for turkeys and cattle and for the remaining humans that eat wheat.

That leaves quite a little to be gotten rid of to some other part of the world. Freight rates and competition have reduced or ended our one time market to the southeast. The government subsidy has caused wheat to be grown in every part of the nation. We have to ship some wheat someplace.

Right now every elevator is full, either of 1949 or of 1948 wheat. We can hardly be expected to build enough storage each year to take care of the crop. We must have some outlet for wheat.

That is why the loss of China is so important. If and when wheat should be put on an actual market basis it would mean more.
