Nitrogen Has Many Farm Uses

Nitrogen, an essential plant food, is often the limiting factor in Oregon crop production, assert two OSC extension service soil conservation specialists in a new extension bulletin, number 999, entitled "Nitrogen Fertilizers" which describes characteristics and uses of most common nitrogen-bearing commercial fertilizers. The specialists, Leroy E. Warner and Arthur S. King, state that for many years the use of legumes and barnyard manure were the principal methods used in increasing or maintaining the soil nitrogen supply. Both materials are still good, they emphasize, but commercial fertilizers carry nitrogen in a readily available form which can be used with profit on most crops.

Reasons for using nitrogen fertilizers, the specialists write, include these: nitrogen stimulates growth of non-legumes, increas-

Puts Vacuum Cleaner to Novel Use

BROOKLYN, N.Y.—Blowing up balloons is just one of the thousand-and-one uses to which this Lewyt vacuum cleaner can be put. Preparing for a Valentine party, this wise young homemaker has attached the wide end of a common kitchen funnel to the end of the suction hose on the vacuum cleaner. The small end of the funnel is inserted into the balloon, the current turned on and, presto, the balloon is blown. One of the major features of the cleaner, which has seven attachments, is that it has no dust bag to empty.

40 YEARS AGO, when Pacific Power & Light started in business, washday was a drudgery day! Electricity cost about 15c per kilowatt-hour, and was used mainly for lighting. Many Pacific Northwest communities had small local power plants which operated only from dusk to midnight. A big job lay ahead for pioneering Pacific Power & Light!

TODAY cheap electricity does the wash in short order. Upstairs and downstairs, electric appliances make life easier for the housewife. For 40 years, PP&L has been promoting new uses for electricity, improving service, reducing rates. Today homes served by PP&L use an average of 4,364 kilowatt-hours a year, at an average price of only 1.44c a kw/h!

If those who read and enjoy the Sherman County Journal
would tell others about it they might enjoy it too. That would help us all.

Progressive American business keeps bringing you better electric living... at bargain electric rates!

Now PP&L has reduced the average price of a kilowatt-hour for residential electric service
