1910 FORTY YEARS AGO, when Pacific Power & Light started in business, electricity on a farm was practically unheard of. When the farm wife wanted water she pumped it by hand. A big job was ahead for the new, pioneering electric company.

1950 TODAY, after 40 years of consistently extending electric service, over 98% of farms are electrified—in the area served by PP&L. The water bucket has been replaced by the electric pump. And the farmer's wife, like her city cousin, uses cheap electricity generously to help do her housework.
