Sherman Co. Fair To Accept Crochet Contest Articles

Somewhere among the crocheters of the country are the 1951 champions of crochet. They will be chosen by their entries in the nationwide crochet contest, held throughout the local, county, state and United States fairs. Entries in the contest are submitted to the fairs who do the preliminary judging. In this vicinity, anyone can enter one or more pieces at the Sherman county fair.

The purse for this contest is $2500 in cash awards, including $500 to the grand national champion. The contestant whose piece is judged superior to all others also is awarded an all-expense-paid trip to Chicago. Cups, ribbons, needlework honors and the excitement of taking part in the contest are additional incentives for entering the competition, the sponsors state. Pieces of original design may compete for extra awards amounting to $500 offered by Woman's Day magazine.

Twelve classifications make the following articles eligible: tablecloths, bedspreads, luncheon cloths and sets, centerpieces, buffet and vanity sets, dollies, scarfs and wall panels, household accessories, edgings and insertions, fashion accessories, pot holders and hot plate mats. In addition, there are four special categories, men only, teen-age girls, 4-H club girls and ladies over 65, in which contestants may submit any crocheted article provided it fulfills all the other entrance requirements of the contest.

All pieces must be crocheted of mercerized crochet cotton and must have been completed since January 1, 1951, though not necessarily started after the first of the year. To be eligible for the national judging in November, entries must win a special nationwide crochet contest ribbon at a participating fair. The needlework department of the fair will judge the entries in all sixteen classifications and award the special ribbons to the crocheter whose work is chosen "best of the fair."

Anyone who likes to crochet will enjoy taking part in this biggest of all needlework contests. For further information about how to enter the contest and for an official rules leaflet, contact the Fair secretary, Mary O. Coons.
