Woven Textiles Being Shown At Maryhill Museum

An exhibition featuring over 60 samples of contemporary woven textiles is on display through the month of April at the Maryhill, Wn., Museum of Fine Arts which opened its 1951 season April 1. Selected and circulated by the Sealandre Museum of Textiles in New York City, the fabrics were chosen to show the influence of ancient patterns in the modern textile designs of today.

A modern Egyptian design had its inspiration from a 3000 B. C. cosmetic box of ancient Egypt. The sea-scape motifs of the early Norsemen have traveled far and appear again in many of the fabrics. One of the patterns is named "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," and is a simplified version of an elaborate scroll design from the Celts who developed the most complicated of the spiral patterns in their remarkable stone carvings. Both the Aztecs of Mexico and the Mayans of Central America are represented in many typical forms. The endless repeat designs of the rug weavers of ancient nomadic tribes of Eurasia, the old polygonal patterns from Arabia, and the intricate fretwork of the Islamic art of the early Chinese dynasties, contribute a large share to the field of modern design in present-day textiles.

The exhibit at Maryhill tends to prove that much of contemporary design can be traced to ancient geometric forms. It also shows that the textile industry of America produces fabrics today which possess all the beauty and texture of old world silken textiles.

The graphic arts will be represented in a second special exhibition of lithographs by 50 leading artists of the Pacific Coast, besides the original lithographs illustrating all the processes in the making of a lithograph from the artist's original sketch to the final printing of the lithograph from the stone.

Both exhibits will be shown through April at the Maryhill Museum, where last year, more than 58,000 visitors came from every state and many foreign countries.

So this is HOUSEKEEPING

There are times when even the most devoted of wives feel a wild desire to wallop their beloved with the nearest available object. For fifteen minutes I had been patiently watching Jeff wander silently from room to room picking up articles and putting them down, rattling doorknobs, poking in cabinets. Finally, in as polite a tone as I could muster I inquired: "Looking for something?"

"Just curiosities," he volunteered at last. "I wondered how many items we have around here made of copper. You know, with the silent butler, plant holders, trays, fireplace stuff, doorknobs, and I don't know what all, we have enough copper to start a small war!"

"No, thank you," I put in firmly. "But that's exactly where copper is going," Jeff replied, "because without it our fighting men would simply have to give up! That red metal is vital to practically all modern weapons. Furthermore," he said, warming up to the subject, "we take so much copper in this country for peacetime uses that about one third of our requirements have to be imported."

It finally developed that Jeff had read an article describing a new government copper order effective March 1st which will prohibit the manufacture of more than three hundred items using copper and its alloys. What piqued Jeff's curiosity was that the article declared the order would affect every American. He pointed out the truth of this statement by listing a few of the prohibited items such as jewelry, dress ornaments, and decorative accessories used in homes. Even more important, the ban will reach many fields including building which depends heavily on copper for hardware, for roofing materials such as flashing, gutters and downspouts, and for pipe and tube in plumbing systems.

We discussed the situation at length and I forgot about earlier urges toward mayhem. Only why did he act male-like and explain the picture after he poked into everything? I had thought he was bad after all!
