OLD Sunny Brook BRAND

the whiskey that's "Cheerful as its Name"

KENTUCKY WHISKEY—A BLEND—86 PROOF—65% GRAIN NEUTRAL SPIRITS—THE OLD SUNNY BROOK COMPANY, LOUISVILLE, KY.

Sherman County Fair Sept. 14-16

It's a great time for the kids, little ones, big ones, all of them. At least all who are in club work.

Little boys learn to comb their hair fitting a calf and little girls find out what an apron is for when baking a cake. They've been working from six to ten months on their exhibit whether it be a Hereford bought last fall, a garden exhibit planted last spring or a sewing program started months ago.

The county fair is the time.

That's when they bring in their stuff to see how well they have done. It is the age-old American custom of competition, the idea that has helped the county progress. The notion of trying to make something better or bigger than anyone else. That's the way we've gotten better cattle, better fashions, better automobiles, better airplanes, and we think better people than anywhere else in the world.

From that angle it's a great day for everyone—when the good old doctrine of competition gets some exercise.

Boys learn to keep their eye on the judge, to get the last gleam of sheen on the hide of a fatted calf (with a Christmas silk handkerchief if necessary), to care for an animal as if he were a king or at least a duke.

Girls learn the arts of the kitchen, how to bake cakes, sew dresses, yes and bake bread. And they learn how to win, and more important, how to lose.

The kids are the best part of it. If all the things adults do, the strutting about, the horse racing, the bull riding, the talking, the stock showing, were all thrown out and forgotten the Sherman County Fair would still be a fine show and worth all the effort and money and planning trouble it costs.

Communities must have clubs.

Here's some pictures of club lodges, schools, meetings and fairs. They are good for relaxation, amusement and entertainment. But of the most importance they are good to train young and old to do the work of a civilized world. Man can hardly be a complete citizen if he can only plow and sow and reap. There are other things needed for him to fill his place in society because man is going to do other things in this world besides eat.

So the fair is a training ground for more than fat calves, tasty cakes, perfect tomatoes.

Here's some pictures of club kids who have won, little Sally Fields who beat all the grown women at cake baking, the Overtons who had the best sheep, the Sathers and Nancy McKean who rode the Shetlands and the girls who won prizes with cake baking demonstrations.
