BORN: To Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Gilder, May 4, in The Dalles, a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Strong came home Monday night after spending a couple weeks in Hawaii, making the trip both ways by air. The trip home was a fast one, done in 8:45 hours with favorable flying conditions and a late start. The islands are nice, Truman says, and the flowers pretty but hardly the prettiest he has ever seen before.

Lee Hines came up from Wasco to do a little business at the court house Wednesday.

Judge E. H. Howell was over from John Day Monday to hold a brief session of circuit court and hear a report of the grand jury which indicted the Indian who hit Charles Blake over the head last winter. The grand jury is Curtis Neal, foreman, Elizabeth Hartley, J. W. Coons, Wm. Jeffers, Wm. Buehler, Gordon Hilderbrand and Charles Adlard. Judge Howell went into The Dalles to hear some cases there this week.

The Camp Fire girls went a long way toward reviving a fine old custom last May day by making and presenting to homes 110 cute little May baskets. They were decorated with the face of a demure maiden and the Camp Fire emblem and filled with flowers from what must have been a scarce supply this year.

Mrs. John Roberts and her son Bud and daughter, Mary, of Arlington were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Barnum over the weekend.

The ladies of the Sherman county luncheon club will meet, Monday, May 10, at the Imperial hotel green room for their regular business and social meeting. Election of officers is in order so plan to attend.

Floating Drive-In For Fishermen

Hungry fishermen on Puget Sound find this floating diner most convenient for coffee and snacks. During the popular salmon derbies, thousands of anglers patronize this handy lunch counter.

Due to the increased interest in outdoor cruising, many fishermen now are able to spend entire week-ends on the Sound living aboard their cruisers at a minimum of expense. The sleek cruiser shown in the photo has sleeping accommodations for two and is powered by two economical Mercury Mark 20 outboards.

With fighting salmon on every side, and a lunch counter right on the fishing grounds, what could be more enjoyable?

Bob Hoskinson is getting along well in the hospital where he is recuperating from bruises and a broken collar bone and five ribs caused by an accident with a tractor, although he isn't happy about being kept in bed. His son, Bob, was up last week end from OSC to visit him.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Helyer, parents of Mrs. Bertha, were injured in an automobile collision at the junction of the old and new Columbia river highway west of The Dalles and are in a hospital there in serious condition.

Word from Bob Henderson at OSC is that Burton B. Bayles, former assistant at the Moro experimental station farm died April 20 at Beirut, Lebanon while on a mission to participate in a FAO meeting. It is understood that he died at the airport from a heart attack. He was a graduate of Kansas State in 1922 and was in Moro shortly after that time.

Mary Margaret Mercer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Sidney Mercer of Ojai, California was married April 24 to David M. Conahay at St. Thomas Aquinas church in her home town. She has visited here often with parents.

Travelers Should Make Budgets

The advantage of budgeting—and how to do it—in spring and summer vacation travel were outlined here today by an expert on touring, Lloyd Crowe, travel manager of Oregon State Motor association.

"Advance planning and budgeting are highly recommended", said Mr. Crowe. "Many motorists who start on a trip without a budget find they travel too far, and don't have enough money to enjoy their vacation."

"The first thing is to plan to travel an average of no more than 300 miles a day. Since the cost of car operation is estimated at three cents a mile, your expense here should be figured at $9 a day—varying with the size of your car. With this and other items of basic expense, the daily budget of a family of four on a comfortable vacation would look about like this:

Car operation	$ 9.00
Meals	12.00
Overnight accommodations	8.00
Admission, Amusements	2.00
Roadside refreshments	1.00
Total daily exp.	$ 32.00

"On this basis of calculation, a one-week vacation would take a budget of $224 for this family of four; two weeks, $448.00, and a full month, $896. For your own protection, you ought to add on an extra 15 percent for incidentals and emergencies. These figures bring up two thoughts—first, travel is expensive; second, there are ways to save, if you cultivate them."

"Here are two or three suggestions on saving. Do your driving during the early part of the day, stopping with plenty of time to find the type of accommodations you want at the price you want to pay. Visit travel attractions that have something worthwhile to offer, steering clear of phony gyp joints; you'll find the best attractions listed in the AAA tour books. Finally, plan your vacation for the spring or autumn, avoiding the peak travel seasons when the roads and overnight accommodations are crowded and prices are at their highest."

Longer Feedings Pays More Money

Surplus Oregon feeders and lower grade slaughter cattle—which both tend to flood fall markets—may be profitably fed to higher grades for spring slaughter. These are preliminary findings of a feeding and grading demonstration conducted during the past season at the Malheur branch experiment station.

Common grade feeder cattle averaged a net profit of $56.16 a head compared to $25.31 for choice feeders during a 150-day feeding trial supervised by Neil Hoffman, station superintendent, and sponsored jointly by the Oregon State college experiment station and extension service. No labor charges, interest or taxes were figured in the costs.

Sixty yearling steers, representing five grades of feeders, were fed identical rations of alfalfa hay and ground ear corn and barley. Groups of inferior, medium, and good feeders fell in between the extremes in net profits recorded for the choice and common feeders.

Ed coles, extension livestock marketing specialist, says that while these results represent only one season's trials, they showed considerably higher profits in feeding common feeders bought at 11 cents a pound and sold as "commercial and good" at 18 to 20 cents a pound. Choice feeders bought at 17 cents a pound sold for 22 cents.

Profits were made by feeding animals into higher slaughter grades and not through weight gains, Coles stated. Feed costs per pound of gain ran higher for all lots than the selling price per pound of live cattle. Cost per pound of gain was 21 cents for common feeder steers and 25 cents for choice feeders.

John Landers, extension animal husbandry specialist, said the trials showed that animals' ability to put on gains may vary widely within grades. Good feeders showed the highest average daily gain of 1.91 pounds, but the 10 animals in the lot ranged from 1.25 pounds per day to 2.53 pounds. Choice feeders showed the lowest average gain of 1.62 pounds. Common feeders averaged 1.86 pounds a day and ranged from 1.29 to 2.1 pounds.

WHAT DO PEOPLE BUDGET FOR LIFE INSURANCE

Is it true that people put 10 percent into life insurance premiums, as agents usually say they should. Not by a long shot.

University of Michigan statisticians, working with data from Federal Reserve board surveys, say the average is closer to 4% after-tax income. Only about seven percent of policy holders out of every 100 earmark as much as 10% of their budget for life insurance premiums, most of these people being in the bottom and top brackets. Among the $7,500 or over families about 12 out of every 100 manage and good" at 18 to 20 cents a pound, while another 21 allocate between 5 and 10% of their incomes.
